Challenges Argument Most of Cash Went for Reparations.

Trade Fight Laid To German Policy

Reply Called Sharpest Since Days Before Start of War.

Hitlerism is blamed by direct innuendo, though not by name, for Germany's financial situation in a sharp official note handed yesterday by Secretary of State Hull to Herr Rudolf Leitner, German Charge d'Affaires here.

Protesting against German suspension of interest payments on some $1,500,000,000 of German obligations held by Americans, the note registers the most emphatic challenge issued to Germany since the days leading up to American entry into the World War.

In effect, it charges that German policy has produced trade conflicts, has frightened short-term capital out of Germany, and has rigged the position of the Reichsbank. The note cites that Germany has used funds, which might have gone to meeting her debt obligations, to buy back at a discount her foreign-held securities and to make purchases "of material susceptible of military use."

Memo Made Public.

Coincidentally, the State Department made public the lengthy text of a German government memorandum delivered to the State Department June 15, in which Germany pleaded that she could not pay because she lacked necessary foreign exchange. She argued that until and unless her creditors, including the United States, reduced tariffs and otherwise let in sufficient German imports to provide the foreign exchange, Germany would be helpless to honor her debts. She thus put it up to her creditors to take German goods or suffer the consequences.

Secretary Hull's note, while agreeing that tariff barriers have complicated the transfer of funds, emphatically disputed the German thesis. His note clearly reflects the State Department's belief that Germany has deliberately depleted her exchange balances in order to appear poverty-stricken. It cites the buying of potential munitions and of German obligations to prove that if Germany were as sincere in wishing to pay as she professes to be she would have serviced her debts with the funds that went for these purposes.

After saying that the United States "receives with grave regret"

Bingham's Son Given 30 Days

Aided Communists Protest Against Alleged NRA Violation in N. J.

Jersey City, N. J., June 28 (AP). Alfred Bingham, son of former Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, who volunteered his services in the American Civil Liberties Union's campaign for peaceful picketing here, was sentenced to 30 days in the Hudson County Jail today. Notice of appeal was filed shortly afterward.

The specific charges against young Bingham, who is editor of the magazine Common Sense, published in New York, were loitering in public places and obstructing traffic. He was arrested last Friday while picketing the plant of the Miller Parlor Furniture Co.

Sentence was passed by Judge William J. McGovern. Bingham was represented by Arthur Garfield Hays. The case was prosecuted by Lewis G. Hansen, a city attorney.

Mrs. Rose Dickter, a representative of the Furniture Workers Industrial Union, a Communist-led left-wing union which started the picketing a month ago in protest against an alleged NRA violation on the company's part, was found guilty on the same charges and fined $25. County Judge Robert V. Kinkead set next Monday for hearing the appeal, and fixed bail at $500 for Bingham and $50 for Mrs. Dickter. Both cases will be heard three days before Thomas W. Lamont, 32-year-old partner of Thomas W. Lamont, [illegible] P. Morgan & Co., goes on trial on the same charges.

McDonald Will Leave Soon for Rest in Canada

London, June 28 (AP).—Canada has been finally agreed upon as the scene of Ramsay MacDonald's extended vacation, it was understood today, but the prime minister will not visit the United States.

Worn by the cares of Government, MacDonald will leave this week-end to begin his holiday at Loissiemouth, Scotland. He probably will sail to Canada within a week or so.

VonPapenAid Is Kept in Jail As Hitler Foe

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, June 28.—Edgar Jung, the man who gathered the material on which Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen based his criticism of the Nazi regime, was still held in jail tonight as efforts to obtain his release from the custody of the secret service failed.

It was understood he not only collected the vice chancellor's speaking material but made derogatory remarks about Chancellor Hitler as well.

But even as his aid lay in jail, Von Papen, the Nazis' severest critic, proved himself an equally good friend of theirs. With Chancellor Hitler confronted by a situation in which various factions appeared determined to lead the administration of Germany into a "Rightest" or a "Leftist" force the vice chancellor went before a meeting of German chambers of commerce to declare:

Predicts Rebirth.

"There is no doubt that the chancellor and leader will successfully complete the spiritual and material rebirth of the nation because the peoples' entire confidence belongs to him."

Von Papen, who ten days ago predicted the doom of the Nazi system if it did not admit constructive criticism, today predicted the doom of the whole European continent if "it should not be able to grant Germany economic recovery and political equality in the council of nations."

The vice chancellor, a non-Nazi, reiterated the Nazi contention that Versailles, where the treaty of peace concluding the World War was signed, was a "storm center," which, he said, "until today radiates a destruction which no country has been able to escape or remove—a fruitless attempt of the past 15 years."

Regarded as Bridge.

Von Papen concluded his speech with an appeal to the business men to interpret the "spiritual return to each other, which is the natural bridge to cooperation between nations."

Perhaps Von Papen's speech itself will be regarded as a bridge between the radical young wing of impetuous revolutionaries, which includes Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment, and the older group of realistic "sub-leaders," such as Rudolph Hess, minister without portfolio; Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, and Hermann Wilhelm Goering, minister of aviation.

The radicals have the wholehearted support of the brown-shirted Nazi storm troopers; the conservatives have the almost equally militant Stahlhelm—the society of steel helmet war veterans—behind them.

100 Vigilantes To Battle for Safe Traffic

62 Deaths Bring Campaign on Careless Drivers and Walkers.

An utterly new program to reduce the Capital's traffic accident toll, a program featuring 100 license jotting "observers" and "the Voice of Conscience," was launched yesterday by the Board of Trade.

Rather, it was outlined; actual launching will take place in a few days when the 100 selected vigilantes have been enrolled and the cruising police car which will broadcast the voice of conscience has received a coat of white paint.

Inspired largely by The Post's recent disclosures that traffic deaths and injuries are increasing alarmingly, the campaign will strive to make Washington safer for motorists and pedestrians alike by appealing to their civic pride.

The vigilante idea will be directed at vehicle operators; the voice of conscience, which will give jaywalkers a public bawling out, is to be devoted to pedestrians. Between them, the Board of Trade hopes to cut down sizably the 1934 accident totals, which stand at 62 deaths and 1,886 injuries so far.

Here is the general scheme, as outlined at a special luncheon meeting yesterday of the board's traffic committee by Chairman Charles Clark, Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, and others:

In a few days Maj. Brown will appoint a group of 100 citizens who will be known as the traffic safety observers committee. They will have fancy membership cards but no uniforms, shields, guns or gas bombs.

When a committee member sees a driver running through a red light, speeding, driving recklessly, etc., he will take down the license number. This will be forwarded to committee headquarters. Next step will be tracing the number and then sending a polite letter to the violator, calling his attention to the infraction of regulations and asking him please to be more careful.

"We want outstanding men on the committee," said Maj. Brown. Then, as an after-thought, "maybe we can use a few ladies, too." He will have the cooperation of the Board of Trade in selecting the group.

The voice of conscience, a Statewide institution in Connecticut, is more direct and its results immediate. The auto, a regulation police car provided by the department and painted a conspicuous white, will be equipped with a radio amplifier (the voice of conscience) and a "spotter."

When the cruising "spotter" sees someone crossing a corner against

Woman, 81, Denied Marriage, Indignant at 'Too Old' Ruling

Modesto, Calif., June 28 (AP).—Because the bride-to-be was "too old" to marry, the law today halted the matrimonial plans of Mrs. Lydia A. Wright, 81, and Charles S. Patterson, 62.

Superior Judge J. C. Needham issued a restraining order against the marriage at the request of Attorney R. V. Wilcox, guardian of Mrs. Wright, and C. H. Ramont, county welfare officer, because they said she was too old to marry.

Indignation was expressed by Mrs. Wright and Patterson, who had filed a notice of their intention to wed.

"I don't see why people get so funny about old people's business," she exclaimed. "I love him; he loves me. It was love at first sight for both of us."

Then, wistfully, Mrs. Wright fingered the gown that was to have been her bridal dress. She tossed aside a bunch of flowers which were to have been her bridal bouquet.

"I don't see why they wanted to stop our marriage," she said. "Charles is a good cook. He could take care of me. I met him a week or so ago through some acquaintances.

"I don't know his affairs, but he has a good record. He is an old bachelor and an old soldier. The first day I met him he said, 'I want to speak to you—I have something to tell you.'

"He said he wanted to marry me, and I told him I'd have to give it some study. The next day I sent for him and told him I would marry him if he would let me be boss, which he promised. He said he would do everything I asked."

Prosecution Of Hosiery Mill Denied

Cummings Holds Facts in Code Violation Insufficient.

NRA to Refuse Return of Withdrawn Blue Eagle, However.

Insufficient evidence to warrant prosecution of the Harriman Hosiery Mills for NRA code violations has been received by the Department of Justice, Attorney General Cummings announced yesterday.

The plant was closed last Monday in protest against revocation of its Blue Eagle in April by Recovery Administrator Johnson. At that time T. Asbury Wright, jr., attorney for the mills, charged NRA sought to "wreck" his concern through "boycotting and every other means at your disposal."

Cummings explained he wrote the National Labor Board June 18 that material it furnished his department did not justify prosecution. He added he had received additional information on the case since that time, but "nothing altered the opinion we expressed in our letter."

NRA Remains Adamant.

Comment by NRA officials on the Cummings announcement was not immediately forthcoming. There was no indication, however, that failure of the Justice Department to institute proceedings would cause NRA to restore the Eagle.

Justice Department officials were understood to feel that the only overt acts alleged by the Labor Board occurred before the hosiery code became effective August 26, last.

The Labor Board, however, was reported to have built its case around what it deemed code violations taking place after the pact was approved by President Roosevelt.

The Justice Department took the position that removal of the Eagle was an administrative function and that failure to prosecute did not imply withdrawal of the emblem was unjustified.

Material furnished the legal branch by the Labor Board, it was learned, included charges that union members were discharged by the hosiery mills July 1, 1933, two months before the code became effective. The attitude of the Labor Board in its report to the Department of Justice was said to have been that failure of the mills to reemploy the dismissed unionists after the code became effective constituted grounds for prosecution.

Any code violator, under the National industrial recovery act, could be fined $500 a day on conviction of such an offense.

It was recalled that Wright wrote Johnson a letter Monday in which he said:

Johnson Willing to Mediate.

"You have been advised in writing by the Department of Justice that they have completed their investigation and find that we are not guilty of violating the law or the code and they find nothing in this case to justify prosecution. Have you no regard for this unprejudiced, nonpolitical, unbiased legal branch of the Government?"

Johnson declared at his last press conference that he had "no doubt" the Harriman mills violated the code. He told of sending five emissaries to Harriman in repeated attempts to compose the controversy. He indicated he was still willing to mediate.

Meanwhile, Cummings disclosed Federal agents still were inquiring into the abduction of Fred Held, vice president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, at Harriman. Held was released unharmed. The Attorney General said agents were instructed to learn whether the kidnaping had any "Federal aspects."

Boy Found Dead, Lightning Blamed

Discovered by Tree Near Body of Squirrel.

Belief that lightning dealt death to a boy and the squirrel he was hunting was expressed yesterday when authorities found the bodies of 16-year-old Edwin Samuelson and that of the small animal beneath a tree near Rhode Island avenue and Second street northeast, following a report that the boy was missing from his home after Wednesday's severe thunderstorm.

At first homicide squad detectives feared young Samuelson was a victim of foul play when his mother, Mrs. Alice Samuelson, of 49 Rhode Island avenue northeast, told of an attack on her son by a gang of colored youths several weeks ago. But the condition of the boy's clothes, soaked and tattered, and discovery of the squirrel's body several feet from the tree, strengthened the theory that both Samuelson and the small animal may have been hurled from the tree by a lightning bolt.

Broken tree branches and shreds of the boy's clothing caught on the bark led police to believe he fell after losing his footing on the uppermost limbs. He was a third-year student at McKinley High School. His crumpled body, lying close to the base of a large tree, was discovered by George Harwood, 16, of 2321 Third street northeast.

Steel Strike Off; Peace Unit Named

By Raymond Clapper.

The strike threat which has hung over the steel industry for months was wiped out yesterday when employers and labor heads agreed to accept jurisdiction of a new, impartial National Steel Labor Relations Board created by Presidential order, under authority of legislation in the closing days of Congress.

One of the most significant features of the arrangement was an agreement by steel employers to engage in collective bargaining with representatives elected by a majority of employes. This, however, carried an important proviso to the effect that no individual employe or group of employes should be denied the right to present grievances, to confer with their employers, or otherwise to associate themselves and act for mutual aid or protection.

President Announces Board.

Walter P. Stacy, chief justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina.

Admiral Henry A. Wiley, retired.

James Mullenbach, labor arbitrator of many years' experience and member of the Petroleum Labor Policy Board.

All three members have had experience in labor disputes, none is known to have any personal interest either in the steel industry or organized labor.

They have been asked to report to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins today to begin work.

President Roosevelt said he anticipated that the new board would bring industrial peace.

Secretary Perkins said: "My impression is that the strike is settled. It is a very real and substantial achievement."

Plans "Special Formula."

Miss Perkins emphasized that the pattern for settling the steel strike is not necessarily the one that will be used in other industrial disputes. It is a formula worked out for this controversy out of suggestions from both sides with modifications by the Government.

That both the steel industrialists and labor have agreed to accept jurisdiction of the new steel board under the terms outlined was regarded as an achievement for the first woman Cabinet member, who was thrust by President Roosevelt into the midst of a bitter strike threat in one of the most hard-boiled of all industries, where strong feeling between employers and organized labor has existed for years.

Secretary Perkins said she believed both sides would abide by the findings of the new steel labor relations board, but she also pointed out that they had thus far only agreed to accept the jurisdiction of the board. Government officials

Scottsboro Case Executions Set

Counsel Plans Second Appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Montgomery, Ala., June 28 (AP). The United States Supreme Court will be asked for the second time to rule on the convictions of the two Scottsboro colored men whose deaths today were set for August 31 by the Alabama Supreme Court.

The Alabama court found no reason to prevent the pair from going to the electric chair for an alleged mass attack on Mrs. Victoria Price, white cotton mill worker and upheld again the death sentences of Heywood Patterson and Clarence Norris that have brought worldwide demonstrations in their behalf.

Associates of Samuel S. Leibowitz, New York attorney and chief of defense counsel employed by the International Labor Defense, said the cases would be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

The Patterson case was thrown out on a technicality today when the court found the bill of exceptions had not been filed within the required 90-day time limit.

The court ruled in detail, however, on contentions of attorneys for Norris that colored persons had been excluded from the jury, holding that the jury commission did not discriminate against the colored race.

Three Oil Workers Die From Gas Fumes

Breckenridge, Tex., June 28 (AP). Three young oil field workers lost their lives today when they were overcome by gas fumes while working in a pit under an oil well 15 miles north of Breckenridge.

They were Joe Williams, 26; Waddell Greenstreet and Leland Price, 24.

Roosevelt Talks to U.S., Flays New Deal Critics, Cites Substantial Gains

Embargo on Silver Ordered by President

Ban Put on Exports to Curb Speculators Making Large Shipments in Hope of Boom Abroad.

President Roosevelt unexpectedly announced last night an embargo against all further export of silver, except under license.

While this move may foreshadow ultimate nationalization of silver, it was prompted by the fact speculative silver began to leave the country yesterday in considerable quantities, according to Treasury officials. Three shipments, aggregating several million ounces, were reported from New York.

The speculators, so the Treasury explained, looked for enough of a boom in silver prices on foreign markets to net them more of a profit than they could hope for under the 50 cents an ounce top price, which the Treasury is authorized to pay for domestic stocks.

The embargo on export, it was said, was intended to nip this speculative design, and hold silver in the country. If and when it is nationalized it must be taken over at not above 50 cents an ounce and a 50 per cent profits tax is imposed to curtail profits.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, at the President's direction, issued a formal order, under section 6 of the recent silver purchase act. It follows the lines of the gold export embargo issued early in the Administration. Exceptions are made covering fabricated silver, ore and metals containing silver in small amounts and also covering foreign silver coins.

At the Treasury it was said that the order does not necessarily herald nationalization of domestic silver stocks, as is authorized under the silver act. There was a long interval between the gold export embargo and the nationalization of gold.

In the case of silver, Treasury authorities said, there was no particular reason for nationalizing domestic stocks at this time, and in the future only as the silver is desired

Detractors Are Labeled "Selfish Minority" or "Doubting Thomases".

Praises Congress For Cooperation

Three-Point Goal for Future Outlined in Radio Address.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In a blunt denial that individual liberty is being trampled upon, President Roosevelt last night told the Nation that "substantial gains" justify the New Deal in its progress toward a life of "security" for every man, woman and child.

Coupling a vigorous defense of the past with a cheerful outline for the future, the President, in another of his famous fireside radio talks, lashed out anew at detractors as a "selfish minority" or "doubting Thomases" who seek either special political or financial privilege.

He praised Congress for a display of nonpartisanship, reviewed accomplishments of the last six months, reaffirmed his faith in the "brain trust" and "evolution" in government, and, finally, pointed the goal for the future:

1. "Better homes for the people of the Nation."
2. More adequate use of land and water resources.
3. Social insurance.

Timed to Rally Support.

It was the President's fifth radio address to the Nation, delivered into a microphone in the White House oval room with all the warm informality that featured his earlier reports. In general, it reiterated his faith in the National planning to which the Administration is wedded.

It was timed, as were his other talks to the Nation during the banking crisis and at the time of the threatened farm strike, to carry his voice directly into the homes of millions of Americans at a moment when his appeal might be most effective in rallying sentiment to support of the Administration. Furthermore, he leaves Saturday on his voyage to the Pacific and is anxious that nothing occur in his absence to upset plans underway.

"A few timid people, who fear progress," Mr. Roosevelt told his unseen audience, "will try to give you new and strange names for what we are doing. Sometimes they will call it 'Fascism,' sometimes 'Communism,' sometimes 'Regimentation,' sometimes 'Socialism.'"

Asserting that, "in so doing, they are trying to make very complex and theoretical something that is really very simple and very practi-

RFC Plans Railroad Aid, Business Grip

By Franklyn Waltman, jr.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, yesterday revealed that this agency had determined on two policies, one to limit to 5 per cent financing costs to railroads and the other to strengthen the management, where necessary, of enterprises indebted to this Governmental lending institution.

The latter policy places the RFC in the position of virtually running banks, insurance companies and other types of business to which it has advaced substantial sums of money. The decision to fix the annual cost of railroad financing at 5 per cent or less, has just been made and goes beyond the purpose for which the RFC was originally established.

Steps have been taken to effectuate each of the policies, Mr. Jones explained. As revealed in The Washington Post yesterday, the RFC notified the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad it will accommodate it with a loan of $17,500,000 at a net annual cost of 5 per cent when the bankers with whom the carrier was negotiating proposed to handle the loan on a basis which would have made the gross annual cost of the financing 5½ per cent.

The policy to "strengthen management" where necessary, which in effect means operation of the enterprise under Government direction, was first instituted in reference to the Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Co., of Chicago, early this year when Walter J. Cummings was elected president of the bank which the RFC controls through stock ownership. At the time directors of the bank were disgruntled and resentful of the RFC's action.

More recently the RFC extended this policy to the Maryland Casualty Co., when at the agency's direction Silliman Evans, former Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and

Housing Act Is Approved By President

Signature Launches Huge Building Program to Aid Recovery.

Working at top speed, President Roosevelt yesterday launched the Administration's vast housing campaign, signed or vetoed a dozen other bills, named a board to compose the steel controversy, and conferred with almost every recovery leader.

Today he is expected to announce his decisions on appointments to the stock exchange or communications commissions, although a possibility lingered that he will forego the selections until after he embarks at Annapolis tomorrow.

Most important of the measures acted on yesterday, the housing act provides for the insurance or limited guarantee of loans for repairs and new building. It is counted on to start a Nation-wide wave of construction, involving more than $1,000,000,000.

The President formally approved its provisions, without comment or without designating a director. Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, has been mentioned, but it is generally understood he will not take the place.

The bill seeks to make it easy to do anything from a $300 repair job on a single dwelling to encouraging $10,000,000 slum clearance projects by Government insurance. Almost at the same time it became law, the National Retail Lumber Dealers' Association announced a 10 per cent reduction on building material.

Under the act, the Government will guarantee 20 per cent of loans up to $2,000 advanced by private agencies for repairs and modernization. It will also insure mortgages for new construction up to $16,000, the mortgagee contributing to an insurance fund.

The Government also may insure low-cost housing mortgages up to $10,000,000. After an administrative agency has been set up, the act provides for the establishment of Na-

Communists Pick California As World Uprising Center

San Francisco, June 28 (AP).—S. Parker Frisselle, head of the newly formed Associated Farmers of California, and Albert Hogardy, head of the Communist headquarters at Sacramento, were agreed today that California had been selected as a focal point for a world-wide revolutionary movement aimed to overthrow existing government.

"California has been selected as the focal point by Communist leaders," said Frisselle, a resident of Fresno, "because of the vulnerability of its perishable crops."

The Associated Farmers was incorporated recently for the expressed purpose of combatting communism in this State. Its stand has been supported by Gov. Frank F. Merriam's declaration that the State has adequate laws to deal effectively with both violence and incitement.

Hogardy, in an interview, talked freely of the Communist program, saying, "We have nothing to hide. We are merely carrying out the details of a program prescribed by the Communist International to unseat the existing capitalistic system of government and substitute a control similar in principle and operation to that of Soviet Russia."

Hogardy said the aims of the Communist party include control of all industries, banks, &c., a six-hour working day, full political and economic equality for men and women, abolition of child labor, cancellation of all Federal debts on small farms, control of all large farms, political and economic equality to the colored race and installation of the Soviet prison system, under which convicts conduct institutions on self-government basis, without guards.

Communist candidates have filed for every county office at Sacramento in the coming elections.

Hogardy denied members of his organization planned to destroy crops to further their plans. He said members guilty of sabotage would be exposed and expelled.

"We believe in the right of free assemblage and free speech," he added, "and will defend ourselves by force, if necessary, to gain these privileges."

Airmen Reach Harbor Grace

Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, June 28 (AP).—Tired, but happy, aviation's Polish-American "brother act," Benjamin and Joseph Adamowicz, late today set their red, white and blue monoplane down here to complete the first lap of their projected transatlantic flight to Warsaw, Poland.

The brothers landed their plane, Warsaw, at 3:16 p. m., Eastern Standard time, completing the journey from Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn, N. Y., in 9 hours and 40 minutes.

The fliers immediately began laying plans for hopping across the Atlantic to Dublin, Berlin and Warsaw, their ancestral home.

The brothers were accompanied on the first lap by Holger Horlis, their flying instructor, who flew to Copenhagen in 1931 in the same plane—then named "Miss Liberty."

Probably the most inexperienced of the transatlantic fliers who have attempted such a feat, the two brothers were happy tonight that they had accomplished at least the first part of what they called their "come-back." Last August they started out from Floyd Bennett Airport, but cracked up landing here.

German President's Illness News Denied

Berlin, June 28 (AP).—Rumors that President Paul von Hindenburg was seriously ill were denied today by the office of the president.

Officials declared that, since going to Neudeck, the venerable field marshal's health has greatly improved and that he is doing exceedingly well.

Shell Blast Kills Four.

Venice, June 28 (AP).—Four civilians were killed and twelve wounded today when a heavy cannon shell exploded at the small fortress near Porto Marghera, while workmen were dismantling the shells for industrial use.

Steel Walkout Off; New Board To Seek Peace

have no pledge that the results will be accepted, but they are hopeful in view of the concessions made by both sides in the negotiations.

President's Order Studied.

The text of the President's executive order was studied by both employers and Amalgamated labor officials before it was promulgated.

"Though the order is in from the President, it represents, in substance, expressed suggestions of employers and recommendations of employes to me," President Roosevelt said in a statement. "I am glad that such progress has been made, and I anticipate that the ... board so created will serve to maintain industrial peace with justice and to further the establishment of sound standards of labor relations in this important industry. I appreciate the constructive and reasonable spirit which has prevailed in both groups. I confidently expect full cooperation of both sides with this board."

Green Guards Comment.

President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, was guarded in his comment, stating, however, that the federation would cooperate with the board in bringing about a settlement of all grievances.

He said:

"The American Federation of Labor deems it advisable to withhold comment for the present upon the appointment of the National Steel Labor Relations Board.

"Information available indicates that all the members of the board have had experience as arbitrators in industrial disputes and through service rendered as mediators in the settlement of grievances which have arisen between groups of employers and employes. The experience thus gained ought to equip and qualify each of them to render constructive service as members of the National Steel Labor Relations Board.

"It will be the purpose and policy of the American Federation of Labor to cooperate with the National Steel Labor Relations Board and to render all service possible in bringing about the settlement of all grievances and disputes upon a fair, just and satisfactory basis."

Members' Records Listed.

A Department of Labor statement listed the records of the three members of the steel board. Chief Justice Stacy has been on the North Carolina bench for 28 years, but has combined with this service wide experience as an arbitrator in five railroad disputes and in other industrial controversies. He is 50 years old and a graduate of the University of North Carolina.

Admiral Wiley, born in Troy, Ala., 67 years ago, became commander of the United States Fleet in 1927, and later served on railroad mediation boards in two disputes.

Mullenbach, born in Houghton, Mich., 64 years ago, is a graduate of Fargo College and did graduate work in Germany. He has served for 22 years as a labor arbitrator, much of the time for the clothing trades in Chicago. He was a member of the Chicago Board of Education and now is a member of the Petroleum labor policy.

The majority representation feature of the steel peace plan is the heart of the arrangement. Labor had insisted that employers deal with representatives elected by a majority of employes in any given plant. This was advocated by President Green and was included in the strike settlement plan adopted at the special convention of the Amalgamated Union in Pittsburgh recently. Employers had, in earlier stages, fought any such arrangement, standing on the ground that they would deal only with their own employes and not with any outside labor organizers.

Employers Change Front.

But Secretary Perkins said yesterday that the employers had recommended the arrangement. This apparently was a change of mind which went far toward making an agreement possible.

At the same time labor receded in accepting the important proviso permitting individual workers and any of their groups to confer directly with employers. Earlier they had insisted upon representation exclusively by agents elected by a majority of employes. This proviso permits company unions to continue to function.

The arrangement would seem to combine proposals so as to permit both A. F. of L. unions and company unions to continue side by side.

Wages and hours disputes, as Secretary Perkins explained the machinery, would be adjusted through collective bargaining processes established under supervision of the special labor board.

This board has authority to investigate complaints of infringement of collective bargaining rights granted under section 7-A of the recovery act, to mediate disputes, to arrange for collective bargaining conferences, and to arbitrate where both sides voluntarily request it.

Can Inspect Pay Rolls.

The board will have access to pay rolls and other documents necessary to certify voting lists for employe elections.

It will report to the President through the Secretary of Labor.

Secretary Perkins described the board as temporary and pointed out that its length of life was made indeterminate in the executive order. Members will receive $40 a day and expenses.

Sections of the President's executive order read as follows:

"Whenever, after its services are invoked by employers or employes, the board, upon investigation, shall find that an election is necessary to determine by what person, persons or organization employes desire to be represented, the board is authorized to order and conduct an election by a secret ballot (including primary elections when deemed advisable), in order to determine by what person, persons or organization the employes desire to be represented. After each such election the board shall certify the results to all concerned, and the person, persons or organization certified as the choice of the majority of those voting shall be accepted as the representative or representatives of said employes for the purpose of collective bargaining, without thereby denying to any individual employe or group of employes the right to present grievances, to confer with their employers, or otherwise to associate themselves and act for mutual aid or protection."

Sharp Hull Debt Note Blames Hitlerism for Trade Conflicts

the German announcement of a six month moratorium and that this Government "is furthermore disturbed" by evidences of discrimination in favor of some foreign holders of German obligations, the Hull note first challenges the German plea that about half of the foreign capital brought into Germany went for reparations.

Apart from citing that United States had no share in reparations, the note points out that the money borrowed from American investors was specifically pledged to "productive purposes," such as reconstruction of the German merchant fleet, modernizing German industries, supplying banking capital, improving public utilities and building roads, houses and canals.

Thus the note takes issues with the German argument that because much of the borrowed money went for unproductive purposes, namely, reparations, Germany is not in a position to pay what was borrowed from American investors specifically for productive purposes.

Assails German Policy.

However, more pointed are the paragraphs in the American note aimed against German policy. The note alludes to the decline of German gold and foreign exchange since the end of 1930 from 3,000,000,000 down to 100,000,000 reichsmarks.

"The German government," said the Hull note, "is no doubt aware that its policies have created opposition in many parts of the world, which has expressed itself in various trade conflicts and the probable reduction of Germany's capacity to transfer."

This reference was broad enough to include the boycotting of German goods in resentment against Hitler's persecutions of the Jews in Germany.

The note then mentioned "the extremely extensive" reduction of German short-term credits because fearful foreign investors rapidly withdrew their funds.

"The desire of foreign creditors to withdraw their credit from Germany has been powerfully stimulated by the anxiety aroused by various phases of German policy," said the note.

Hits Debt Paper "Grab."

It next mentioned the "substantial repurchases of German securities previously held in foreign markets." Germany took advantage of the fall of German security values to buy up her paper. The money that went for this might have been used to pay interest, so the note indicated.

Similarly, and significantly, the note pointed to the purchase of war materials.

"It has generally been judged," it said, "that it is the obligation of a debtor government to so direct its policies that sums required to meet external obligations receive priority over all but the essential needs of the government. It is widely believed that during recent months German foreign purchases of material susceptible of military use have been extensive and financed out of available exchange resources."

And in unusually tart phrases, the note said:

"The asserted anxiety of the German government to make every effort to meet its obligations can not be proven by a mere display of its depleted balances, but must be evident from an examination of the whole trend and operation of German policy.

"An Inadequate Approach."

"For these and other reasons, the narrow and exclusive connection which the German government seeks to establish between the payment of its external obligations to American investors and the current state of the direct bilateral commodity trade balance between the two countries seems to this Government a distinctly inadequate approach to the problem."

For, as the note added, if payments are to hinge upon how much Germany sells to given countries, then discrimination will follow and "thus augment the causes of dispute and ill-will between countries."

The Hull note declared that this Government "does not desire to argue away the importance of liberalizing the commercial policies throughout the world so that the discharge of all international obligations will become possible with less strain and difficulty."

Expect Effort to Pay.

"It can not admit, however," the note added, "this further tendency to connect the obligation of making payment with the narrow set of considerations just discussed, and it must reiterate its expectation that the German effort to meet those obligations will be as great as the sum total of all circumstances shaping Germany's capacity to pay permit."

England and France have already moved to retaliate by impounding German trade balances. The United States with more of a trade balance in Germany than Germany has here is in no position to follow suit.

This note backs up the direct protest which the American Ambassador to Germany had been instructed to make. Twice before the United States has protested that Germany was giving preferential treatment to Swiss and Dutch holders of German bonds.

Altogether no more vigorous official communication has emanated from Washington since war days.

Vigilantes to War For Safe Traffic

the red light, jay-walking or committing some other pedestrian sin, he will announce so all can hear: "Now there's a lady in a red hat taking her life in her hands by dodging machines that have the green light. She should wait until she gets the 'go' signal."

Or words to that effect.

The psychological effect, proponents of the innovation believe, on the embarrassed walker will be of such potency as to make him heed safety regulations henceforward.

Aimed at Walkers.

Of course, the "voice" will single out law-breaking motorists as well, but it will concentrate on pedestrians.

The scheme has been tried out successfully in Detroit, said Clark. He pointed out that of ten traffic deaths last month, seven involved pedestrian-vehicle collisions.

Judge Gus Schuldt, who left police court to attend the luncheon, praised the program. William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, pledged the cooperation of his department, adding that inspection checkups have shown 40 per cent of all pedestrians crossing Thirteenth and F streets go through the red light.

Through the double-barrelled program, the Board of Trade aims to put Washington in first place in the 1934 National Traffic Safety Contest. The District Commissioners yesterday issued a proclamation, at its suggestion, urging citizens "to abstain from those careless acts which cause the bulk of accidents on our streets, to obey the signs and signals and the regulations of our city, and to observe those rules of courtesy and self-respect in driving which lie at the heart of the automobile safety problem in this country."

Robert F. Fleming, president of the board, outlined the campaign in a radio address following the luncheon and appealed to Washingtonians to help make the Capital a model in elimination of "the tragedy and suffering which results almost every day from unfortunate traffic misadventure."

Austrians Vent Sarajevo Rage In Bomb Blasts

Anniversary of Start of War "Celebrated" by Terror Reign.

Vienna, June 28 (AP).—Explosions of bombs reverberated throughout Austria today as terrorists observed with dynamite the twentieth anniversary of the assassination which touched off the World War.

Railroads, power plants and buildings were targets of bombers, who were active particularly in central and western provinces of the nation.

Bomb Aimed at Barthou.

One bombing, which tore up railroad tracks near Bludenz, may have been aimed at Louis Barthou, Foreign Minister of France. A train taking the minister back to France had passed a half hour before the rails and roadbed were torn up by the blast.

Power plants were dynamited at Ruetz, Aachensee and Hall. Other railway bombings were reported from Hohenems Dirbbirn and other communities of Vorarlberg Province, through which Chancellor Dolfuss is scheduled to travel tomorrow.

At Innsbruck a blast wrecked a cafe and damaged a progovernment printing plant.

Church, Theater Damaged.

An explosion in Mackart Square in Salzburg damaged numerous buildings, including a seventeenth century church. Other bombs there damaged the home of a priest, the municipal theater, the house of Wolfgang Mozart, the composer, and the headquarters of the Fatherland Front. Another blast damaged the basement of the provincial government building at Salzburg, and still another the city water works plant.

Jones Reveals New RFC Measures to Aid Railroads

Edward G. Lowery, a special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, were elected vice presidents of that enterprise. The RFC invested $7,500,000 in preferred stock of the Maryland insurance company, giving the Government agency a working control.

Evans has now been made president of the casualty company and is in full charge of its affairs, superceding F. Highlands Burns, who had been president since 1920, and who came with the company in 1898, when it was established. Burns was elected chairman of the board of directors of the company.

Policy to Be Maintained.

Chairman Jones yesterday revealed that neither th Baltimore & Ohio loan offer nor the elevation of Evans to head the Maryland Casualty Co. was an isolated case. Although Evans' elevation to the presidency of the casualty company marked the first time the RFC has assumed the management of one of its debtors, aside from banks, there will be similar instances from time to time, oJnes explained.

"Wherever we are convinced that enterprises to which we have advanced substantial funds have managements that need strengthening, we shall use our voting rights to that end," Jones asserted, adding that he did not believe other stockholders were opposed to such a course.

Must Protect Loans.

"We fully intend following through every advance or loan we have made to assure as far as possible the repyament of the Government's money. This may be called interfering in the management of private business, but if we did not do everything within our power to protect the money we have advanced, we might as well go home."

Jones explained that Evans, a protege of Vice President John N. Garner, was the best qualified man available to assume charge of the Maryland insurance company. Evans, who comes from Texas, as does Jones, was a Washington newspaper correspondent and a vice president of the American Airways, prior to his appointment as an Assistant Postmaster General. He had no expreinece in the insurance or surety busines prior to his election as vice president of the Maryland company.

Discussing the offer to let the Baltimore & Ohio have a loan of $17,500,000 at 5 per cent net, Jones said that "any railroad with collateral can get money here at 5 per cent." He said he saw no reason why railroads should have to pay more than 5 per cent for short-term financing.

IndustrialLoans 6 Per Cent.

He also revealed that 6 per cent would be the top interest rate on the industrial loans that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would made undre the Glass act. This means that any industrial borrower unable to get money from his banw at that rate would be entitled to come to the R. F. C. for accommodation on the ground he could not get financial assistance on a reasonable basis.

Asked why the New ork Central Railroad, which borrowed in April from the private money market $59,900,000 for a 10-year period at 6 per cent, was not given the benefit of the 5 per cent rate, the RFC chairman replied: "Well, that is water over the dam; they probably paid a little more than they should have."

B. & O. May Have More.

He said the RFC was willing to give the B. & O. "a little more" than $17,500,000 if the carrier thought it could use the money. He explained the railroad was negotiating a loan of $25,000,000 through a private banking house in New oYrk in order to meet $17,500,000 maturity now held by banks at 6 per cent, and to add to their cash account.

"I believe they intened making us a $5,000,000 payment on account out of this $25,000,000 loan," the chairman said, adding that the carrier needed the additional $2,500,000 to settle some sums of indabtedness held by banks.

Acceptance Foreseen.

If the B. & O. decides to accept the RFC offer of $17,500,000 at 5 per cent, Jones said, the agency would extend for from three to five years a loan of $25,500,000 maturing on August 10. He evaded a question whether this maturity would be extended if the carrier borrowed the new money from th New York house.

Dandruff Germs Cause BALDNESS

Here Today...

...Gone Tomorrow

Almost 90% of all cases of baldness can be traced to some form of dandruff infection. Dandruff is caused by minute "germs" (known technically as Flaschenbacilli of Unna and bacille a bouteille of Sabouraud). The sketch at the left, made from a microscope slide, shows these dandruff germs, greatly enlarged.

Thomas treatment removes dandruff germs from the scalp, and leaves it antiseptically free of infection. It stops abnormal hair-fall, ends scalp itch, and permits hair to grow again on the thin and bald spots. Call today for a free scalp examination and see for yourself exactly how this reliable, proved method overcomes all types of local scalp ills.

cal," the President stated his belief that "what we are doing" is merely "a fulfillment of old and tested American ideals."

Offers an Illustration.

Here, as a homely illustration, he compared the changes in Government to alterations soon to be made in the White House Executive offices.

"If I were to listen to the arguments of some prophets of calamity who are talking these days, I should hesitate to make these alterations. I should fear that while I am away for a few weeks the architects might build some strange new Gothic tower or a factory building or perhaps a replica of the Kremlin or of the Potsdam Palace.

"But," continued the President, "I have no such fears. The architects and builders are men of common sense and of artistic American tastes. . . . It is this combination of the old and the new that marks orderly, peaceful progress—not only in building buildings but in building government itself."

Prefacing his remarks with a summary of the Seventy-third Congress, which he said was equal to the task of "completing and fortifying the work it had begun in March, 1933," the President mentioned as most important the changes in the monetary system. This he said had been made "more fair and just * * * doing justice to both gold and silver."

Relief Placed First.

"Relief," continued the Chief Executive, "was and continues to be our first consideration. It calls for large expenditures and will continue in modified form to do so for a long time to come. We may as well recognize that fact."

In thus disclosing that the heavy drains of the past will be maintained, in some degrees at least, the President blamed it squarely on "the paralysis that arose as the after-effect of that unfortunate decade characterized by a made chase for unearned riches and an unwillingness of leaders in almost every walk of life to look beyond their own schemes and speculations."

As "the second step" the President mentioned recovery, inviting his listeners to compare the situation today with that of 15 months ago. "Reform and reconstruction" likewise were found necessary, he said, leading to results which "have justified our course."

Mr. Roosevelt said he could give statistics of every character "as unanswerable measures of our National progress"—to show gains in pay checks, "hundreds of thousands reemployed" or given new work, "the great rise in the value of farm products," "the great increase in bank deposits."

Pays Respects to "Die Hards."

"But the simplest way for each of you to judge recovery," he continued informally, "lies in the plain facts of your own individual situation. Are you better off than you were last year?" Are your debts less burdensome? . . . Is your faith in your own individual future more firmly grounded?"

Here the President paused to pay his respects to the "plausible self-seekers and theoretical die-hards" who "will tell you of the loss of individual liberty." "Turn to the Bill of Rights of the Constitution," he asked them, "read every provision . . . and ask yourself whether you personally have suffered the impairment of a single ot of these great assurances.

"In other words, it is not the overwhelming majority of the farmers or manufacturers or workers who deny the substantial gains of the past year. The most vociferous of the doubting Thomases may be divided roughly into two groups—first, those who seek special political privilege and, second, those who seek special financial privilege. * * *"

Continuing, he asserted, "it is true that the toes of some people are being stepped on and are going to be stepped on. But these toes belong to the comparative few who seek to retain or to gain position or riches or both by some short cut which is harmful to the greater good."

As has become his habit in recent addresses, Mr. Roosevelt interpolated a paragraph in defense of the "brain trusters." He did not mention that designation, but little doubt remained he had them in mind in declaring "the Administration needs and will tirelessly seek the best ability that the country affords."

Concerning "evolution"—a word reduced from "revolution" by the President some months ago—he cited the NRA as a good example of continuing change. "We are still feeling our way in solving problems which relate to self-government in industry," he said, and then added significantly, "especially where such self-government tends to eliminate the fair operation of competition."

Looking to the "larger future," the President gave no more than a glimpse. Improved livelihood by land and water development, and social insurance, forms the basis of the survey of National planning now under way.

"Later in the year," Mr. Roosevelt told his hearers, "I hope to talk with you more fully about these plans." They are understood to embrace such questions as unemployment and old-age insurance, as well as the planned development of National resources, such as the Tennessee Valley.

President Talking to Nation

President Roosevelt, over a National radio hook-up last night, again took the Nation into his confidence and gave an account of the progress to date of the recovery program and outlined plans for completing the job. This photo shows the President in a similar broadcast some time ago.

President Places Embargo on Silver

toward the accumulation of monetary reserves of one-fourth silver and the rest gold, as prescribed in the silver bill.

"The object," said one of Mr. Morgenthau's chief assistants, "is to prevent speculative profits by international traders. Silver began ot slip outu in considerable quantities today. The speculators' theory was that they could get more on a booming market abroad."

The Treasury has been pursuing its silver buying policy steadily. This evidently led silver holders to expect prices on the London market would rise above the 50-cent limit at home. The three large shipments reported from New York were all to London.

The Treasury held the announcement up until evening, with the usual object of waiting until domestic markets were closed. Treasury officials expected no material effects upon prices to result, however.

Greencastle, Ind. (U.P.).—June 11 was a busy day for Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of De Pauw Uniersity. After presiding at De Pauw's commencement exercises at 10 a. m., Dr. Oxnam flew to Columbus, Ohio, and delivered the graduation address at Ohio State University at 5 o'clock.

Gov. Langer Wins Dakota Primary Vote

G.O.P. Supports Convicted Executive; Sinclair, Lemke Lead.

Fargo, N. Dak., June 28 (AP).—North Dakota's primary voters wrote in big letters today "We want Langer"—and, in the same manner, turned thumbs down on State officials antagonistic to the chief executive since his conviction of defrauding the United States Government.

The same Republican votes that approved Langer's nomination for Governor also apparently had assured virtually the entire Langer faction ticket of victory.

Langer's vote exceeded the number cast for his two opponents, T. H. Thoresen and J. P. Cain, in returns available from 840 out of 2,242 of the State's precincts. The vote: Langer, 43,082; Thoresen, 22,956; Cain, 19,768.

Candidates of the nonpartisan league, including veteran State officials who have refused to recognize Langer as chief executive since his conviction, were faring badly on the basis of today's unofficial tabulations of the Republican primary vote.

United States Senator Lynn J. Frazier, indorsed by the two league factions, commanded a nearly 4-to-1 lead over his nearest opponent, while Representative William Lemke, similarly indorsed, was in top position in the Congressional race.

Representative J. H. Sinclair, seeking Republican renomination, held a slight lead over Usher L. Burdick, Langerite, with returns from the rural precincts diminishing Sinclair's margin.

Walter Welford, Langer candidate for lieutenant governor, took the lead in his race against Lieut. Gov. Ole H. Olson, anti-Langer candidate, who claimed the governorship on the ground Langer's conviction disqualified him from holding office.

Two liquor control measures, which proposed to legalize sale of intoxicating beverages, appeared slated for defeat on the face of meager returns, while a school tax measure was favored.

tional mortgage associations to provide a market for insured securities and guarantee deposits in building and loan and similar institutions.

The President also approved the Kerr tobacco marketing control bill and the Taylor bill, giving to Secretary of Interior Ickes control over the public domain to prevent overgrazing and soil deterioration. The latter measure, which sweeps under Federal control up to 80,000,000 acres, was hailed by the President as "a great step forward in the interests of conservation."

Modeled on the Bankhead cotton control act, the tobacco control measure represents a further attempt to protect growers cooperating in controlled production, by imposing tax levies on the minority which refuses to poin the control plan. Maryland tobacco and Virginia cun-cured and cigar leaf are exempted because they were left out of the AAA act.

The vetoes all concerned minor bills, as the President cleared his desk of all but two important measures. They are the Frazier farm mortgage moratorium bill, which he is expected to veto today, and the railroad retirement measure.

Tomorrow morning the President plans to motor to Annapolis to board the cruiser Houston for the Caribbean and Pacific. If he finds he is unable to leave so soon, however, the President will wait over until Monday to depart.

Girls Aid Injured Mate.

St. Clairsville, Ohio (U.P.).—Applying woodcraft and first-aid principles, 14 Junior Girl Reserves rushed a 13-year-old girl, one of their number, to a hospital after she had suffered a broken hip in a fall from a swinging grapevine. The girls carried her on a litter to a road, where an ambulance was summoned.

Death in Electric Chair Near, Mother Leaves All to Children

Ossining, N. Y., June 28 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Antonio, in the shadow of the electric chair but pathetically hopeful her execution still will be stayed, today bequeathed her few remaining possessions to her children.

Striving desperately to retain some composure, a few hours before she was scheduled to enter the execution chamber, she wrote:

"My sewing machine to my daughter, Phyllis; my wedding dress and wedding ring to my daughter, Marie; the Holy Image to my son, Francis——"

Then she stopped writing to sob. "I have nothing else for poor little Frankie."

The 28-year-old woman was to be led to the electric chair soon after 10 p. m. E. S. T. Samuel Feraci and Vincent Saetta, whom she allegedly hired to slay her husband, were to be electrocuted at the same time.

Attorneys for Mrs. Antonio, Feraci and Saetta made last-minute efforts to obtain reprieves or commutations, but Gov. Herbert H. Lehman remained silent.

Mrs. Antonio arose early. She had slept poorly and scarcely touched her breakfast. Feraci and Saetta, showing no emotion, ordered bounteous meals.

The State contended a $5,000 insurance policy on the life of Mrs. Antonio's husband, father of her three children, provided the motive for the slaying in Albany.

Antonio's body was found on Easter Sunday morning, 1933. Numerous knife and bullet wounds caused his death.

The State charged Mrs. Antonio agreed to pay Feraci and Saetta $800 from the insurance proceeds.

Crash Victim Asks $25,000 Damages

Damages of $25,000 were sought in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Miss Edith Johnson, 1319 Newton street northwest, for serious permanent injuries she asserts she received in an automobile accident last February.

Miss Johnson named John Bolinger, 647 Franklin street northeast, as the defendant. She charged, through Attorney T. Edward O'Connell, that while she was a passenger in a machine driven by Bolinger, he drove the machine on the wrong side of the street and crashed into a tree.

Previously, Miss Johnson had filed suit against Bolinger's father, Benjamin, for $25,000 damages on the ground that he was the owner of the car. The suit listed hurts to Miss Johnson's eyes, nose, face, arms and legs, and a concussion of the brain.

Former N. Y. Policeman Sentenced in Robbery

San Francisco, June 28 (AP).—Harry G. McGivney, 29, who said he was a former New York policeman, was sentenced to from five years to life in the San Quentin Penitentiary today for robbery.

He pleaded guilty to holding up Robert Smith, night clerk in a Polk street hotel, and taking $135.

"Bomb's" Blast Proves Fatal To D. C. Child

Joseph Meagher, 7, First Fireworks Vicitm of Season.

Fireworks claimed their first victim of the season in Washington yesterday as Joseph Meagher, 7, of the 2800 block of North Capitol street, died in Emergency Hospital of burns suffered when a "bomb" exploded in the basement of his home Wednesday.

Joseph and his brother, Paul, constructed the "bomb" from powder they poured from a large firecracker they found near their residence.

Using a piece of string as a fuse, they struck a match. The fuse failed to ignite, so they took some shellac and placed it in the powder. A moment later, as Joseph bent over the box, there was an explosion, which spattered sizzling fluid. The flames set fire to Joseph's clothes.

Joseph's brother was burned as he tried to beat out the fire. Mrs. S. E. Linkins, housekeeper, also was burned as she beat the blazing garments which seared Joseph from head to foot.

The Fire Rescue Squad took Joseph to the hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Meagher, sr., his parents, were at his bedside when he died. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

Boy, 2, Asks More Flying.

Boston (U.P.).—Though only 2 years old, Larry Belinn is a flying fan. He is a son of Clarence M. Belinn, chief of maintenance for National Airways. A few weeks ago, Larry made his first flight. And he liked it so well that his father is having a hard time keeping him "grounded."

Perfect Violin His Goal.

Kansas City, Kans. (U.P.).—The one desire of John Mavey, 76, retired railroad worker, is to make a violin with a perfect tone. He has made instruments for 35 years, most of them during his spare time, and now believes his present piece of work will realize his ambition.

NEW KIND OF HEAT FOR YOUR HOME
"Upside-Down" Invention of Gar Wood Makes Oil Heat Cost Less
Perfected Air Conditioning Keeps Family Healthy
AMAZING as it may seem, Gar Wood, from whose brain have sprung dozens of inventions that make life more livable for all of us, has revolutionized heating methods. So whatever your present heating equipment may be, you will be interested in this short message.
Gar Wood has given you clean, cheap, efficient oil heat and practical air conditioning. Now, every home can afford to banish dry, devitalized air and its irritating effects on nose, throat and lung tissues to cause colds and more serious ailments.
Double Heat Extraction!
Oil heating, as perfected by Gar Wood, literally turns ordinary heating equipment upside-down and works on a principle of double heat extraction! All possible heat is first extracted in the usual way in the upper part of the equipment. The hot gases are then forced down into what is ordinarily ash pit space, where the remaining usable heat is literally squeezed out!
Can you afford to go on paying the costs of colds, sore throats, and kindred ills due to bad air conditions? Are you tired of footing exorbitant fuel bills? Want to rid your home forever of dirt and dust? Or get rid of old-style, inefficient oil burners? Gar Wood offers you a cure for all these troubles at a cost so low it may surprise you.
There is only room in this short message to give you the barest outline of all the revolutionary facts about Gar Wood heating inventions. If you want additional facts, without obligation, either mail the coupon or see Gar Wood equipment. Expect something new and amazing . . . and you will not be disappointed.

PWA Allocates $8,000,000 for Sewage Plant

No Mention Made of New Hospital or Other Needed Items.

Acting under the bill empowering the District to borrow Public Works Administration funds, the PWA yesterday allotted $8,000,000 for construction of a local sewage disposal plant.

The plant, to be built at Blue Plains, Va., is the first of the District's four projects under the bill to be approved. No mention was made of a new Tuberculosis Hospital, additional Gallinger Hospital buildings or walls for Lorton Reformatory, other items in the $10,750,000 bill.

Thirty per cent of the $8,000,000 allotment is an outright gift to the District. The remainder must be repaid.

In announcing the project, Secretary Ickes said the plant will greatly aid ending pollution in the Potomac River. He called upon Maryland and Virginia to do their share toward this end.

"The District Commissioners have informed me they regard the sewage disposal plant as the most important on their list of proposed projects," Secretary Ickes said. "I concur in this opinion and have asked the Commissioners to submit to the Public Works Administration at the earliest possible date, their detailed plans for the plant.

"This project will go a long way toward purifying the Potomac River, which is being ruined by pollution. Unsatisfactory conditions in the river and on Chesapeake Bay will not be rectified, however, until Maryland and Virginia take steps to meet the District half way. I sincerely hope the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and the City of Alexandria will interest themselves in this project."

The sewage disposal plant, Secretary Ickes pointed out, will fit in with a general scheme for purification of the Potomac. The PWA already has made an allotment of $2,500,000 to Arlington County, Va., for a county sewer system. The Secretary referred to a report of the United States Public Health Service which emphasized that cooperative action from Maryland and Virginia would be necessary if pollution is to be removed effectively.

The PWA estimated four years will be required to complete the plant. It figured an average of 670 men would be employed on the job daily.

Two Hurt as Truck Wrecks Building

Driver, 8 Others Escape Injury in Crash.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Two persons standing in Blanton's Store, Cedon, Carolina County, were painfully injured yesterday when a truck left the highway and plunged into the building. The driver and eight other occupants of the store were unhurt.

Those injured were Mrs. F. Reid Blanton, wife of the store proprietor, and G. C. Robinson, colored. A car pulling out of a nearby side road forced the truck driver to swerve his heavy vehicle from the highway, witnesses said.

Inquest Today In Rose Death

Youth Killed in Car Crush, Fleeing Unpaid Bill, Police Say.

An inquest into the death of James B. Rose, 21, of Seat Pleasant, Md., who was fatally injured in an automobile accident early yesterday while allegedly attempting to escape paying a barbecue proprietor for several sandwiches, will be held tonight at Upper Marlboro.

Prince Georges County Policeman Arnold Naylor said Rose and three companions purchased the sandwiches from the Dixie Pig Barbecue at Greater Capitol Heights. Without paying for them thy sped away in an automobile toward Marlboro.

When several hundred yards away the car careened into a ditch and overturned. Rose's three companions, who were less seriously injured, were Preston L. Dove, Maryland Park, driver; Julian Hart, 20, Washington, and Harry Moreland, 20, of Capitol Heights, Naylor said.

All were taken to Casualty Hospital, where Rose was pronounced dead. Dove is being held without bail at the Marlboro jail. Acting Coroner Horace J. Taylor will preside at the inquest.

Strike Nears In Rayon Mill

Virginia Labor Federation Gives Ultimatum at Hopewell.

Richmond, June 28 (AP).—R. T. Bowden, special representative of the Virginia Federation of Labor, tonight said a strike of union workers in the Tubize-Chatillon rayon mill at Hopewell is imminent and will be difficult to prevent unless the plant management changes its policy toward the union.

Union workers were meeting in Hopewell tonight to discuss the situation since the ruling of the National Labor Board, which the mill management challenged on the ground that the board did not have jurisdiction. They were to receive tonight details of a conference held yesterday between union representatives and Raymond Burrows, plant manager.

Bowden, in a statement tonight, said the mill had ignored the ruling of the labor board, which, among other things, ordered that ten employes be reinstated. Today was said to be the last day set by the board for compliance with the ruling.

"Under the circumstances," Bowden said, "only three courses are open: The National Labor Board can refer the case to the compliance division of the NRA for appropriate action, or the board can certify the case to the Department of Justice for prosecution in the courts, or the local union can take action to compel observance of the board's decision, which means a strike.

Battlefield Park Bill Is Approved

$50,000 Will Be Spent on Monocacy Site.

Frederick, Md., June 28 (Spl.).—Word was received here today that the bill providing an appropriation of $50,000 for a military park on the Monocacy Battlefield, Frederick Junction, 3 miles south of here, had been signed by the President.

The information was received by former Judge Glenn H. Worthington, a member of the Battlefield Commission, from Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to the President.

The President's signature concluded efforts of seven years to have a National park established on the Civil War battle site. The first measure was introduced in the House in 1927. Several years later the House passed the bill but the Senate reduced the appropriation from $50,000 to $5,000. This amount was considered insufficient and no effort was made to take up the appropriation. It is understood the Secretary of the Interior will have charge of expenditure of the new appropriation.

Winchester Likely To Get Convention

Winchester, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Winchester may be selected as the 1934 meeting place of the Virginia State Horticultural Society, which holds its annual convention in December.

During the last few days, officials of the society have been considering the advisability of holding the meeting here. A check-up has been made on facilities available both for the business sessions and for exhibition purposes.

Andrew Bell, secretary of the chamber of commerce here, recently extended to the society an invitation to meet in Winchester. E. D. Nininger, Roanoke, president of the society, and W. S. Campfield, Staunton, secretary, are seriously considering their recommendations to the board of directors. The society met here in 1932.

Boy Under Water 5 Minutes Revived

Annapolis, Md., June 28 (Spl.).—William Walker, 18, of Berwyn Heights, Md., owes his life to the rescue squad of West Annapolis Fire Company.

Rescued from South River late yesterday afternoon after he had been under water five minutes, the rescue squad, consisting of Wilbur Dulin, Paul Shaw and Frank Guy, revived him after 45 minutes of heroic work.

Walker, with Martin Harker, Leroy Jones and Aubrey Jones, all of Berwyn Heights, had been swimming from a float to a wharf at South River Beach. He made one trip, but was overcome and sank while attempting to repeat the feat. After Harker made an unsuccessful attempt to save him, Leroy Robins, of Washington, and Henry Stabler, South River, who were nearby in a boat, dived and brought him out of 10 feet of water. First aid was applied by a group of bathers until arrival of the rescue squad, who completed resuscitation.

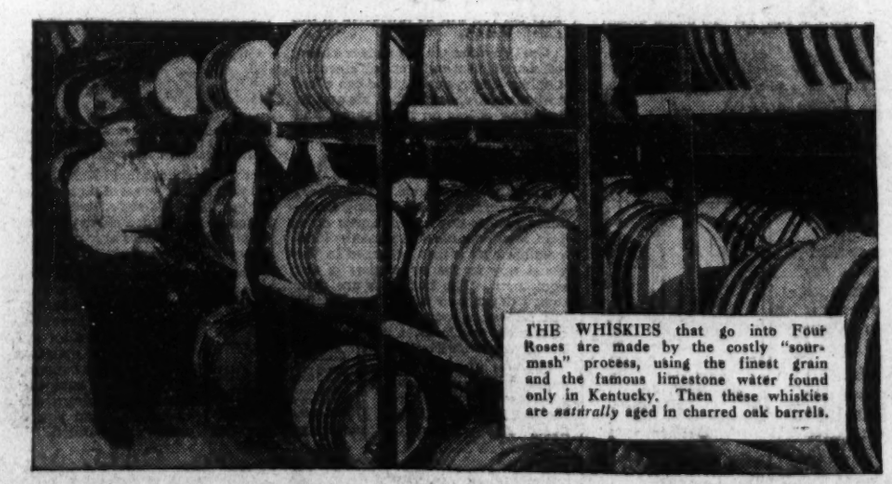
31 leading whiskies were put in plain bottles, marked only by letters. Then several scores of people tested the whiskies "blind." The test was run off like a tennis tournament, with winner meeting winner until only one whiskey was left. And that whiskey was Four Roses!

FOUR ROSES WHISKEY
victor in big taste tournament!



THE WHISKIES that go into Four Roses are made by the costly "sour-mash" process, using the finest grain and the famous limestone water found only in Kentucky. Then these whiskies are naturally aged in charred oak barrels.

WINNER over 30 other brands in a "blind" taste-test! Winner over brands costing even twice as much!

That's the record of Four Roses. And that's why we sincerely believe you will discover in Four Roses just the kind of whiskey you've been looking for.

It's so rich and mellow it's a real pleasure to drink it straight. No shudders. No coughing. Four Roses goes down like honey! And if used with moderation, there's no hangover.

The reason? Four Roses is made of fine, naturally aged, hand-made Kentucky whiskies. No tricks! And it's made by a company that knows how! For Frankfort has been making fine whiskies for four generations. Its yeast culture—key-ingredient in making great whiskey—has been carefully guarded for 50 years.

You'll find Four Roses at any of the better liquor stores. In full pints and quarts. Get a bottle and try it! Insist on Four Roses at hotels and restaurants, too.

P. S. You can be certain of the purity of Four Roses. For it comes sealed in the patented Frankfort Pack that must be destroyed before the bottle within it can be removed.

Try these other famous whiskies!

Storm's Death Toll Now 3 In Baltimore

Drowning Claims Pair; Man Struck in Park by Lightning.

Baltimore, June 28 (Spl.).—Maryland's toll of deaths attributed to the weather rose to three today with the discovery in Stony Creek of the body of a young girl who was drowned last night.

Yesterday a colored boy was drowned while swimming in Baltimore Harbor, while trying to find relief from the heat, and a man was killed by lightning as he stood under a tree in Druid Hill Park during the heavy storm which swept the city.

The young woman who drowned last night was Miss Alvina Czyryca, 18. With a party of friends, she had gone to Stony Creek and the girls in the party preceded the men into the water. Miss Czyryca was missed by her companions, and after a four-hour search her body was recovered by coast guardsmen.

Coroner Stephen J. Everd, of Anne Arundel County, gave a verdict of accidental death.

Baltimore was busy today cleaning up the damage caused by the cyclone which struck the western section of the city yesterday during the electrical storm. Streets were blocked with debris from roofs and porches blown from houses, and scores of cellars were flooded by the heavy rain. Damage from a five-alarm fire caused by a lightning bolt is expected to reach $100,000. A paper warehouse and all its contents burned.

2 Change Venue In Maryland Suits

Frederick, Md., June 28 (Spl.). Removed from Washington and Allegany Counties, two suits for damages aggregating $12,000 were filed in circuit court here today. One for $10,000 was brought by Harry Lady, Washington County, against Elmer E. Brandenburg.

The plaintiff alleges that the defendant wrongfully caused his arrest on a charge of larceny. The plaintiff declared he could not obtain a fair trial in Washington County and the case was removed to Allegany. The defendant then alleged that he could not obtain an impartial trial in that county.

The suit for $2,000 was brought by J. L. Ramey, against Harry K. Zeller, both of Hagerstown. The plaintiff asserts that the defendant entered his home and removed household articles. He charges that the goods were removed under the provisions of a contract between the parties. The suit was removed to Allegany County on the petition of the plaintiff for a change of venue and later was sent to this county on the allegation of the defendant that he could not obtain an impartial trial in Allegany.

Acquittal Ordered In Slaying Case

Judge Asserts State Had Proved Self-Defense.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Before any defense testimony was heard, Judge Frederick W. Coleman yesterday directed the Stafford Circuit Court jury to return a verdict of not guilty for Sam Wilson, arraigned on the charge of having murdered Jesse Morton, colored.

Wilson shot and killed Morton on the afternoon of May 1 near their home in the Brooke section. According to the State's case, Wilson premeditatedly killed Morton after going to his home for a shotgun and returning to renew a quarrel with his victim. Before leaving to get his gun, the prosecution held, Wilson told Morton he would come back and shoot him.

The defense claimed that Wilson shot only when Morton advanced on him with an open knife. No defense witnesses were heard, however, as Judge Coleman instructed the jury that State witnesses had proved Wilson acted in self-defense.

Roanoke, Va., June 28 (Spl.). Nearly 2,000 more automobiles have been placed on the roads in the Roanoke area as a result of cheaper State license tags, the local branch of the State division of motor vehicles reports. Due to the increased use of cars, revenue has declined only 22 per cent.

The V-type engine means more body room. Cylinders, instead of running along in a line, are banked in 2 sets of 4 each. Less engine space is used. That's why the Ford V-8 gives you big-car roominess.

Ritchie's Foes May Combine For Primary

Candidates for Nomination May Split Honors on Opposition Slate.

Baltimore, June 28 (Spl.).—Coalition of the various anti-Ritchie political groups into one strong, central unit capable of more vigorously opposing the Governor's fifth-term aspirations than are the present scattered cliques, was viewed as a distinct possibility here today.

According to political strategists in the camp of Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor, the only way to checkmate the Ritchie ambitions is to combine against him.

Consequently, a conference is expected soon between Mayor Jackson, George L. Radcliffe and Dr. Charles H. Conley, the only three avowed Democratic aspirants for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in addition to Gov. Ritchie. Exactly when and where this parley is to be held has not yet been revealed—in fact, probably is not yet known to the principals themselves. But that it will be held, possibly within a week, is considered to be an assured fact.

Opponents Friendly Among Selves.

That there is nothing like the bitter animosity between Jackson, Radcliffe and Dr. Conley that each of these leaders shows for Gov. Ritchie, has been noted ever since the campaign began. Jackson is always cordial to Radcliffe, both to his face and when speaking of him when Radcliffe is not present, and Radcliffe is equally considerate of the mayor, and both the mayor and Radcliffe speak well of Dr. Conley, as Dr. Conley does of them.

But all three have little good to say about Gov. Ritchie.

A combination of the three anti-Ritchie candidates, backed by the sage advice of Senator Millard E. Tydings and supported by the anti-fifth-term district and county leaders throughout the State—there are many of them—would present a powerful threat to a Ritchie success in the primary, the political experts say.

Danger to Party Feared.

Mayor Jackson, as a practical politician, knows this, according to reports, and so does Mr. Radcliffe. His political mentor, Senator Tydings, is known to be anxious to prevent a disastrous primary in the Democratic party, but he is even more anxious to prevent Ritchie from again reaching the Executive Mansion in Annapolis. Such a victory, he has said repeatedly, would mean the virtual disintegration of the Democratic party in the State.

That Dr. Conley also is well aware of the advantages of a union of anti-Ritchie forces is not to be doubted.

One of Jackson's leading supporters pointed out recently that for every candidate in the field, the Governor's chances of renomination are improved. Ritchie would like to see a dozen candidates opposing him, for then the opposition would be so split up that the Governor's still powerful political machine would have little difficulty in crashing through to a victory over the scattered forces engaged in an internecine warfare on their own account.

So, according to the reports, the anti-Ritchieites will soon meet to eliminate this danger.

Jackson Likely Selection.

The prevailing opinion is that Jackson will remain the opposition candidate for Governor, while Radcliffe will switch his candidacy to that of Senator. Dr. Conley will probably run for State comptroller. It is argued that on such a strong ticket, State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor would be glad to run for attorney general. Jackson would thus be the beneficiary of the combined support of Radcliffe, Conley and O'Conor for the gubernatorial nomination—and would stand an excellent chance of defeating Ritchie, it is argued.

Whether this will come to pass remains to be seen. A week, or two weeks at the most, should tell the tale.

Boastful Hiker Finds Policeman To Welcome Him

Fredericksburg, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—How he knocked a man in Salisbury, Md., over the head with a hammer was described by a hitch-hiker to a salesman who picked him up north of here. The motorist telephoned police here from a roadside cafe unknown to his passenger.

Police responding to the call pretended that they had received a radio message from Salisbury asking that the hitch-hiker be intercepted. The man emphatically denied having been involved in any trouble more serious than a dispute with his girl.

Telephoning Salisbury authorities to verify the stranger's statement, police were informed that the Maryland town "would rather have the man anywhere but in Salisbury." The braggart was released.

340 Families In Park Area To Get Homes

Shenandoah Subsistence Homestead Project Announced.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Ickes has announced establishment of a subsistence homestead project near the Shenandoah National Park.

The homesteads will provide for 340 families who must vacate the area to be incorporated in the new park. The exact locations was not announced, except to say four sites would be selected within a few miles of the park boundary.

Federal Subsistence Homesteads Corporation has allocated $310,000 to this project. In addition, relief authorities have expressed their willingness to assist in the rehabilitation of these families, 35 per cent of whom have been on relief rolls during the past year.

The approval of plans providing houses for these mountain families marks one of the final steps in securing the official establishment of the Shenandoah National Park, the announcement said.

The State of Virginia has carried on the work of acquiring the territory which includes some of the finest recreation area in the eastern United States, intending to turn it over to the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior for administration as a National playground. The park project could not be finally approved until some adequate provision had been made to care for the families now residing within the mountainous region.

It is proposed to locate the subsistence homesteads in four sites, all within a few miles of the park boundary. Each family will have a house and approximately ten acres of land. They will continue to practice small-scale agriculture, as they have done heretofore, but also will be able to find some employment in the park.

In accordance with the usual plan followed by the division of subsistence homesteads, the families will purchase the homesteads by making small periodic payments over a term of 20 years.

Maryland Hit By Bar Leader As Intolerant

Judge Dennis Declares State Has Lost Old Freedom.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 28 (Spl.).—Marylanders can no longer boast that religious toleration, the goal of the original settlers of the State, is still in effect there, it was declared today by Judge Samuel K. Dennis, president of the Maryland Bar Association, in an address before members of the organization at its annual convention here today.

Judge Dennis cited the Sunday blue laws, which exist in some parts of the State, and the laws requiring marriages by religious ceremony rather than by civil ceremony, as proof that the ideal of religious toleration, which was the goal of the Calverts, no longer exists.

Cites Pioneer Work.

"We can not say, as our forefathers could have said 300 years ago, that Maryland in the quality, liberality and freedom of her social, political and judicial systems, is in advance of the whole world," Judge Dennis said.

"Nor can we harbor any strong hope that 300 years hence any contribution of our 1,500,000 population to the perfection of institutions of civilization will be remembered.

"Yet the influences the little band of 200 of the State's first settlers generated, and the foundations of freedom they laid in an Indian village will be blessed by men and will be remembered with wonder, love and praise so long as Maryland deserves to survive."

His Final Message.

Judge Dennis' speech was his final message to the bar association, as his term of office ends with the current convention. His valedictory speech was in line with the State's Tercentenary celebration.

"Traces of religious intolerance persist in Maryland," he said. "For instance; granted one day in seven as a day of rest is indicated upon both religious and economic grounds, nevertheless men are not permitted in Maryland to select their own day of rest, or rather, their own days of work.

"Again persons perhaps of no religion, while free to make other contracts, are embarrassed to find that they can not enter into a valid contract of marriage in this State without a religious ceremony—a performance which not infrequently degenerates into a ceremony of extreme sacrilege."

Wise County Boasts Champion

Wealthy Farmer Has Never Written a Letter, Tasted Liquor or Joined Any Kind of Organization.

Big Laurel, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—John C. Addington, farmer residing on Rocky Point, two miles north of here, is perhaps the holder of several world's records—for not doing things rather than for doing them.

Mr. Addington, who is 63 years old, has never written a letter nor spent a penny for postage, although he has a fair education; he has never tasted intoxicating liquor; he has never joined any church, society, lodge or association, and he has never uttered an oath, although he admits that there have been occasions when he felt like it.

Forty-five years ago Addington was married and built for himself and wife a small log house on a piece of ground his father gave him. Since that time he has never moved, but has kept pace with the times and fashion in building in this region.

The log house was first weatherboarded, then a frame addition was built. Later a stone wing was added and recently a concrete porch was built around the house. As the years went by he kept buying tracts of land adjoining his farm, and today he owns more than 1,000 acres. Unlike his neighbors, he has steadfastly refused to sell his coal or timber rights.

In short, John C. Addington is one of the wealthiest men in Wise County, and he has never given his note to any man or asked any man to go his security, nor has he been any person's security, but he confesses he has been tempted.

Frederick Pageant Depicts Maryland County Founding

By Marion Butler.

Frederick, Md., June 28.—Before packed audiences here tonight in the Frederick Fair Grounds, 600 Marylanders presented Frederick County's huge, three-hour tercentenary memorial pageant, depicting in tableaux and stirring action scenes in the history of the county.

The pageant, scheduled to take place again tomorrow and Saturday nights, is Frederick's contribution to the State-wide observances this year of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Maryland.

In honor of the occasion, Gov. Ritchie and Mayor Lloyd C. Culler issued proclamations calling attention to the event and setting aside three days for the celebration.

As a side attraction, an exhibit of old equipment used during the early days of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was formally opened in the afternoon by city and county officials. The equipment includes a replica of the "Tom Thumb" engine, the first in service on the railroad; the old "600" engine, exhibited at the centennial celebration in Philadelphia in 1876, a replica of the second engine built for the railroad; the bell placed in the first freight station in the United States and other original equipment and also a modern conditioned passenger coach and other modern equipment.

Daring Horsemanship.

Following an exhibition of daring horsemanship by the famous E Troop, Third Cavalry, U. S. A., from Fort Myer, Va., under Col. Kenyon A. Joyce, trumpeters clad in medieval page costumes announced beginning of the pageant with arrival of Miss Frederick and Miss Columbia, the pageant queens.

In her role of Miss Frederick, Miss Helen Caldwell Potts welcomed visitors, while Miss Margaret E. Dutrow, as Miss Columbia, acknowledged the greetings. Escorted by a guard of honor, they and their court, composed of more than 60 girls in ruffled dresses and the garbs of the States of the Union, were led to seats of honor, from which they reviewed the pageant.

From the setting up of an Indian village, through Indian medicine and tribal dances, the primitive wilderness which was once Frederick County was portrayed in opening scenes.

The settlement of Fredericktown in 1745 was presented as Alfred Gaver, in the role of John Thomas Schley, schoolmaster settler, led his group of 100 families from the German Palatinate to portray the establishment of homes upon land then known as Taskers Chance.

In an impressive group of tableaux, the early religious influences were depicted, including the founding of the first native-born church in America, the United Brethren in Christ, at the homestead of the Rev. Peter Kemp, near Frederick, in 1800; the first confirmation class confirmed by Bishop Claggett, first Episcopal Bishop of Maryland, following his consecration, at all Saints' Parish; the founding of the first parochial school in America by Elizabeth Bayley Seton, in 1809, in a stone hut at Emmitsburg, Md., and the early missionary work of Jesuit Fathers Williams, Frambach and Dubois.

Famed Persons Portrayed.

Famed Maryland citizens portrayed in the pageant were William M. Storm, as Thomas Johnson, who, June 15, 1775, nominated George Washington as Commander in Chief of the Continental Army and who later became first Governor of Maryland; Mrs. Hammond Clary, as Barbara Frietchie; Teddy Gardiner, as Roger Brook Taney, noted Supreme Court justice of Dred Scott decision fame and his bride, Kitty Taylor, in the guise of lovely Anne Key, sister of Francis Scott Key, and the winsome character of John Chapman, "Johnny Appleseed," who barefoot, wearing coffee sacks for shirts and mush pans for hats, planted the beginnings of the country's famous orchards.

Other popular scenes in the pageant were formation of the Cresap Rifles of Frederick, the first moccasin and tomahawk equipped companies to reach Boston from the South in 1775; the Monocacy River Battle tableau; and the homecoming of Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, Frederick's distinguished hero of Santiago Bay.

Memories of modern history were stirred when the Drum and Bugle Corps of the Francis Scott Key Post, No. 11, American Legion, and its Auxiliary presented scenes showing the services of Frederick County men and women during the World War. Others participating in this were Capt. and Mrs. Bernard C. Morris, Miss Mary Stoner, the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, and other county patriotic organizations.

As the huge concluding spectacle of the pageant, the growth of America was presented in the final scene, the Masque of the Nations. Emblematic of America as the "melting pot of nations," groups from various towns in the county presented dances and drill formations.

Nations Represented.

Girls from Brunswick, Md., represented English, Belgian and French girls; Jefferson, Md., Italian girls; Walkersville, Md., Chinese and Japanese girls, and Irish lassies; Libertytown, Md., Dutch and Sailor girls, and Frederick, U. S. A. girls.

In grand finale, the huge cast paid tribute to Maryland's noted lyricist, Francis Scott Key, singing his "Star-Spangled Banner."

Lights were dimmed and notes of a bugle sounding "taps" in memory of Frederick County's lost heroes closed the pageant.

The pageant was arranged by the executive board composed of Robert Warfield, chairman; F. W. Harnwell, James H. Gambrill, jr., William B. Lebherz, Francis Petrott, Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower and Charles Hayward, general secretary. It was staged by Pageant Master Russell L. Rowland.

Chairmen of pageant committee were: Talent, R. I. Smith, of Frederick; historical, F. W. Harnwell; ticket and finance, Lewis B. Lebherz; publicity, George N. Payette, jr.; program, William B. Bennett; pageant grounds, Charles F. Bowers, and parade, Alton Y. Bennett.

Queen's Attendants.

Attendants to Miss Frederick were Margaret Harris and Alice Long, pages; Elizabeth Tyson, Clara Clary, Marybell Castle, Anne Dennis, Lois Town, Charlotte Cade, Jane Roddy, Adele Lebherz, all of Frederick; Dorothy Wiseman, of Thurmont; Louise Saylor, of Walkersville; Dorothy Bollinger and Lois Schnell, of Emmitsburg; Ruth Seiler, of Jefferson; Frances Felser, of Woodsboro, and Elizabeth Flook, of Middletown.

Members of the Boy Scouts of America acted as color bearers. Indians were depicted by members of the Natomia Council, No. 38, Degree of Pocahontas, and Chippewa Tribe, No. 19, Improved Order of Red Men, and residents of Frederick and Middletown.

Colonial scene participants were Thurmont and the Cresap Rifles Companies from Jefferson, with Edwin Himes, as Capt. Michael Cresap, and Richard Smith, as Capt. Thomas Price.

The religious tableaux were arranged for the United Brethren in Christ by the Rev. DeWitt T. Zuse, the Jesuit tableau by the Rev. John J. Donlan, S. J., and the Mother Seton tableau by students from St. Joseph's College, Emmitsburg.

The closing feature Saturday night will be a dance at the Catoctin Country Club attended by Miss Frederick County, Miss Columbia, the court of honor and the ladies representing the States.

Farmers Warned By U.S. Land Bank

Jackson Says Seized Land Will Be Sold.

Baltimore, June 28 (AP).—Farmers who have the idea of "unloading" their farms on the Government by failure to repay loans, and then expect to get their property back later, are doomed to disappointment, Charles S. Jackson, president of the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, said yesterday.

"Farm lands are very definitely increasing in both sales price and demand," Jackson said. "Those few farmers who plan to unload their farms on the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore in the hope of regaining them later are due for a severe disappointment. The Land Bank has a rapid turnover in farms left on its hands."

Of the 228 farms on hand at the end of May 31, a total of 108 were in Virginia, 89 in Pennsylvania, 27 in West Virginia and 4 in Maryland. There were none in Delaware.

Use of the "Ark" As State Museum Of History Asked

Annapolis, Md., June 28 (Spl.).—The replica of the Ark, which, with one of the Dove, was used in the tercentenary celebration at St. Mary's City, and also is to participate in a similar celebration at Baltimore August 10 to 12, will be brought to Annapolis and given permanent berth as an historical exhibit, if plans launched by Commander Philip V. H. Weems, of the Navy, retired, are consummated.

Commander Weems, a member of the tercentenary committee and commander of the S. Guy Carleton Parlett Post, American Legion, said the craft would be managed by the legion and the Junior Naval Militia. He said it is his plan to make the craft a floating museum for historical objects obtained from time to time.

Lutheran Merger Is Recommended

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Recommendation was made today at the annual United Lutheran Synod of West Virginia at Jackson's Mill for negotiations toward a merger of the United Lutheran Church and the group of churches embraced in the United Lutheran Conference.

Its delegates to the biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church, which will meet in October in Atlanta, Ga., were unanimously urged to initiate such negotiations. Each group includes about a million members.

Civil War Veteran Paints Lee As Part of '61 Picture History

Fredericksburg Man, 90, Still Has Jeff Davis and Booth to "Do."

Fredericksburg, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Napoleon Bickelman, 90-year-old Civil War veteran still busily engaged in art, has presented an oil portrait of Robert E. Lee, painted when he was 86 years of age, to the local office of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park.

A newspaper clipping accompanying the gift reveals the story of Mr. Bickelman's art, which he first undertook when 72 years of age. Gen. Grant and Gen. Lee and many other leading soldiers of both sides of the Civil War have been painted by the old soldier-artist, whose home is in Wyoming, Pa.

During the war he fought with the Ninety-sixth Pennsylvania Infantry. He participated in many of the battles of the war, and while engaged here was shot in both legs at Salem Church. He reports that he was exchanged because he found out the Confederates were exchanging the very badly wounded, and so "groaned a little louder than I had to."

The aged artist lost one eye while pulling weeds in his garden, though before then he had been shot twice during the Civil War, struck once by lightning and had engaged in Indian campaigns.

He has stated that he believes he will have completed a "history of the Civil War in paint" when he produces portraits of Jefferson Davis and John Wilkes Booth.

His father served under Napoleon, accounting for his first name.

Madison Ideals Junked, Colby Says in Speech

Last Congress Lacked Will of Its Own, Montpelier Audience Is Told.

Montpelier, Va., June 28 (AP).—In the quiet hillside cemetery where James Madison lies buried, Bainbridge Colby, former Democratic Secretary of State, today made the observation "that the present Government of the United States shows scant respect for the principles deemed so vital by the framers of our Government. An attentive observer," he said, "must be struck with the almost complete subsidence of the legislative branch of our Government."

Colby delivered the principal speech at exercises commemorating the ninty-eighth anniversary of the fourth President's death. Former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri; Senator Harry Flood Byrd and Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia sent their regrets. The Governor is slightly ill in Richmond, while Senator Byrd was forced to remain with Mrs. Byrd, who is also indisposed.

More than 100 representatives of State and patriotic organizations were present in the only shaded part of the old graveyard where the ceremony was held. Nearly all placed flowers or some other memento on the Madison grave.

D. C. Resident Sponsor.

Arranged by Grosvenor Dawe, of Washington, a Madison admirer, today's program was a forerunner of the 100th anniversary celebration to be held in 1936. The William Byrd Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was host to the gathering, with Mrs. Charles Blackwell Keesee, State regent, extending the greetings.

Madison, Colby said, was "a pillar of freedom, founder of laws, builder of the Constitution." He traced the history of Madison's career, mentioning the President's work in helping to frame the Constitution, and quoted a speech in which Madison said: "The powers of government should be so divided and balanced that no one can transcend their legal limits without being checked and restrained by others."

He said Madison had stood firm, during the writing of the Constitution, for the principle that the three branches of the Government be distinct and separate.

Last Congress Criticized.

"I will not digress on this occasion, said Colby, "to comment on the scant respect shown of late in Washington for these principles of liberty, deemed so vital by the framers of our Government."

Throughout the last session of Congress, Colby asserted, laws were passed "upon the call and behest of the Executive, without pause, without examination of their provisions and often in ignorance of them."

"It speaks volumes, however, for the prophetic vision of the framers of the Constitution, who foresaw the possibility of just such a thing, and sought to protect us from it."

The other principal speaker, Charles Hall Davis, of Petersburg, found no such conflict between present-day American Government and the tenets of the framers of the Constitution.

Too Many Short Cuts.

"Mental inertia, individual lassitude and a world-wide spirit of hopelessness have followed the conflict of 1914-1918," Davis said. "Stunned at the failure of existing forms of government, to avoid so ghastly and useless a sacrifice of life and property and prevent so great a setback to civilization, men have taken counsel of despair. Unlike Madison and his compeers, they lack the courage to face the truth and to recognize that unchanging principles of right and justice still control the intellectual, ethical and spiritual development of humanity.

"Political short cuts and temporary expedients have been adopted in place of a sound and scientific philosophy of government, and today we face the menace of the possible safeguards to human liberties obtained as a result of thousands of years of heart-breaking struggle and embodied in the plan of government established by the founders and framers. Moreover, constant improvement in mechanical devices have predisposed the people to look for change. The present attitude of men seems to be that if a machine does not function perfectly it should be scrapped and some more efficient machine be adopted."

Radio Waves and Ripples

IT now develops that all the time N. B. C. had its spies out in the hinterland discovering that what the American radio audience really wants is culture, the music of the masters, &c., the boys in the home office at New York were discovering that the American radio audience wants nothing of the sort.

The home office boys passed out questionnaires to 17,659 men and women before turning over the same to the Statistics Department for compilation in the following table of program preferences:

Type of Program	Preference Per Cent
Dance music	27.3
Comedy skits and comedians	8.8
Drama and mystery	7.1
Symphonic music	6.9
News broadcasts	6.2
Variety shows	5.2

Other preferences representing less than 4 per cent but not more than 2 per cent of the voting visitors to Radio City, were, in order, military bands, operettas, Hawaiian music, grand opera, choruses and politics.

While it was about it, N. B. C. decided it might just as well ask some questions of the Advertising Federation of America, which happened, handily, to be having a convention about that time; and, now the home office boys have in their files indisputable evidence that:

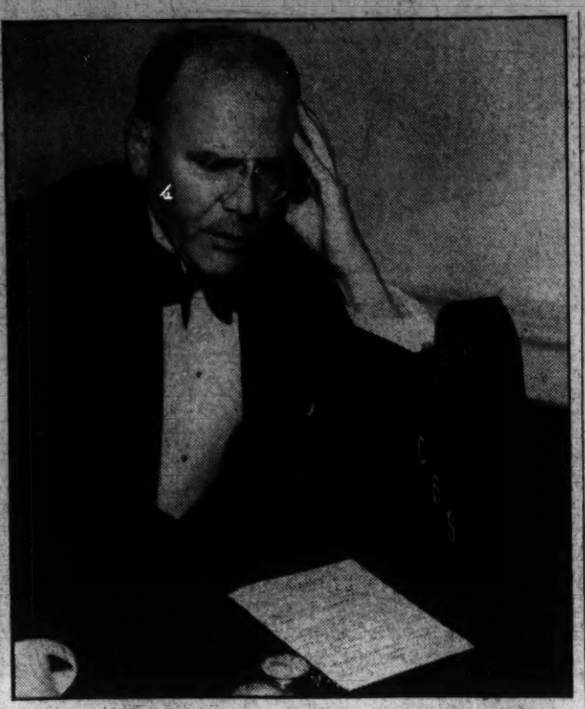
Of some of 200 voting members of the A. F. of A., 54.8 per cent like studio audiences with their programs; 23.6 per cent have radios in their cars; 77.6 per cent have radios in their summer homes (capitalists); 48.3 per cent favor the installation of radios in their offices (loafers); 56 per cent have one radio in the home; 31 per cent have two; and 9 per cent have three.

Instead of stopping right there, N. B. C. went on and discovered that 76.7 per cent of the A. F. of A. believe that the New Deal has aided business recovery, and that 84.7 per cent of the companies represented had increased their business during 1934. What the Statistics Department failed to observe and what probably is much more to the point is that 84.7 per cent minus 76.7 per cent gives 8 per cent Republicans.

We are inclined to question the integrity of the Statistics Department on only one item. That's the Hawaiian music item. We don't think the American radio audience, or as much as 2 per cent of it, likes Hawaiian music. We doubt the Hawaiians like it.

Ripples.

Anyone who has written a piece of music he wouldn't mind his neighbors hearing should get in touch with Freddie Rich, radio bandman, at N. B. C. . . . Freddie has volunteered to broadcast the works of composers who have still thus to rend the shrouds of obscurity . . . N. B. C.'s 11-year-old Mary Small graduates from elementary school this week . . . and is as excited, they say, as any other little girl graduate . . . though she seems to be taking quite calmly the $1,500 she receives for three broadcasts a week . . . Columbia's featuring of Jerry Cooper on the Saturday Night Morton Downey Studio Party programs gives the boy barytone a total of four broadcasts a week on the junior chain . . . he's been in New York less than a year . . . add radio stars headed for Capital vaudeville boards before fall: Jeannie Lang, of C. B. S.



Tough for others, but easy for him. H. V. Kaltenborn (above), is one of the few radio speakers who can look a microphone in the face and talk without anything more mind-refreshing than a few hastily scribbled notes. The Columbia news commentator will summer in Russia.

Whitecaps.

A VERY astute gentleman is Leroy Mark, a gentleman for whom opportunity knocks once and is admitted.

For years Mr. Mark has operated WOL in a manner satisfying to himself and nearly every one concerned, with the possible exception of the good people inhabiting the Chevy Chase and Bethesda areas, and all they knew about Mr. Mark and his station was what they read in the papers because they could'nt hear it. There was interference, commonly called "heterodyne," which sometimes made things embarrassing for Mr. Mark what with one or two customers living out that way. There was one customer in particular who used to tell Mr. Mark, in a joking sort of way, that about the only time he could hear WOL was when he went fishing somewhere near Solomons Island. Mr. Mark, of course, laughed about this, but you could tell he had something on his mind.

There wasn't very much Mr. Mark could do for the customer who went fishing at Solomon's Island, until the President signed the communications law. Then he walked over to the Federal Radio Commission with an application which asked that he be allowed to put up another 100-watt broadcasting station, which was all right, because under the new law the commission is privileged to license as many 100-watt stations as it finds consistent with its guardianship of the "public interest." The station, of course, is intended to be located somewhere in Chevy Chase where the fishing customer lives.

Now, Mr. Mark has it all figured out that the only wave length which would be of any use whatsoever to a prospective radio station builder in Washington is 830 kilocyles. On any other available channel, it seems, there would be the equivalent of a deathlike silence all around. But 830 kilocycles would do very nicely for the people of Chevy Chase and Bethesda and quite a number of places.

That's why we say Mr. Mark is a gentleman of exceeding perspicacity.

How did Prof. Snoop know that it was Mr. McSquiggle, that harmless little book salesman, who really shot the doctor's niece and not, after all, the butler?

We don't know, and neither does Lieut. John H. Fowler, ballistics expert of the Metropolitan Police Department; but there is a lot about these master detectives Lieut. Fowler does know, and he'll tell about it when the second of The Post's new interview series goes on the air from WJSV this morning at 11:15.

"I Feel Full of Pep!"

Why Suffer?

"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets enough for the way they have helped me," says Mrs. M. Grill, 1001 E. Clay Street, Shamokin, Pa. "I always suffered a great deal of pain each month. I felt tired and sick all the time. In the morning I was dizzy and faint. Usually I had to stay in bed a day, sometimes only half a day. A friend of mine told me about these Tablets and they helped me very much. I suffer very little now and I feel full of pep."

Drifting To Recriminations.

The British reply to the American debt note suggesting the possibility of making payments in kind is in itself a form of payment in kind. That is to say, it is brusque, sanctimonious and self-righteous, characteristics which may be found in too many of our own official communications on this unsavory subject.

It is to be hoped that this may be the last of a series of futile recriminations which has only served to emphasize the irreconcilability of the American and British attitudes toward the war debt problem. The political and economic aspects of the controversy have been debated to the point of exhaustion. If there is nothing new to be said it will be much better for both sides to abandon a totally unprofitable argument.

It is well within the bounds of possibility, however, that the discussion may be continued, without causing justified annoyance on either side of the Atlantic, along definitely constructive lines. The British have not completely disposed of the payments in kind suggestion put forward by Secretary Hull. In the case of at least two raw materials—tin and rubber—where the British Empire controls a large proportion of the world supply, it is by no means necessarily true, as the British note asserts, that "the economic objections to cash payments would apply with equal force to deliveries in kind."

Furthermore, the British Government invites a merited rebuke by refusing to accept any responsibility for reaching an ultimate settlement, leaving it to the creditor to make the next move. Its critics will conclude that the British contemplate a policy of inaction resulting in ultimate debt cancellation by default. A debtor who is sincerely desirous of fulfilling his obligations to pay to the limit of what is practicable can not afford to adopt a merely passive or complacent attitude toward his creditor, however unreasonable the latter.

Still less can Great Britain afford to take this attitude after so recently preaching to Germany what she signally fails to practice toward the United States.

Vacation Reading.

President Roosevelt will be heavily supplied with reading matter when he sails for Hawaii, a large library, selected by the Navy Department, having already been put aboard his ship. Unfortunately for the amateur psychologists, the choice is not the President's own. But, judging from his intense interest in our naval history, the list will probably be quite acceptable to him. It ranges from a melange of detective stories up to a large number of serious works, mainly books on matters connected with the sea. If the President is like most of us it is doubtful if more than a very few of the selection will be read.

Choosing books for vacation is always a pleasant task. One starts out by dusting off those volumes which have stood on the shelf all winter, or even longer—those books you always have meant to read if you only had the time. These usually are "serious books," by authors like Gibbon or Spengler or Tolstoi. Then comes the fun of choosing the crime stories, without which no vacation is supposed to be complete. Then are gathered copies of the Yale Review, or the Atlantic Monthly, which have been lying around unopened and which you feel ought to be read before they are too old.

Arrival at the vacation-spot sees the selections carefully unpacked. For three weeks you expect to sit and rest and read. Well, you sit, and you rest, but you just don't read. This is especially true aboard ship. You stare at the books, sometimes you even pick one up. But they return with you unread—a fit subject for wifely gibes.

Perhaps President Roosevelt will do better than most. But we suspect that as he lolls on the deck of the Houston he will not get far into "International Law" (2 vols.), or "The Practical Book of Oriental Rugs," or even "Murder on the Ten-Yard Line."

Sitting Pretty.

Government employes will receive substantial benefits from legislation enacted at the last session of Congress. One-third of their pay reduction was eliminated more than four months ago. On July 1 another one-third of the cut will be restored. That leaves salaries only 5 per cent below their base rates, with the possibility of further adjustments if prices rise.

In some respects the act restoring automatic promotions to various groups under civil service rules, which has just been signed by the President, is more important than the increased pay. It will give District school teachers, policemen and firemen; as well as employes in the postal service, the military establishments and some other branches of the Federal service, the right to regular promotion. This includes the advancement that would normally have come to them during the last two years if this section of the law had not been suspended.

Reliable estimates place the annual cost of this measure at $40,000,000. Added to this is $126,435,000 that will go to Government workers in the form of increased pay during the fiscal year beginning Sunday. While these benefits must be included in the vast program of Federal spending, they are of a different character than many of the other outlays. They merely restore the major part of the rights and remuneration previously regarded as reasonable for Federal and District employes. There is no extravagance in paying decent salaries to efficient employes for necessary work.

In gratification at this outcome, however, it is well to remember that many who will benefit from these increased salaries owe their positions to the spoils system, and to the spoils system alone. Eradication of the extremes which this abuse has taken is probably more important, from a scientific personnel viewpoint, than wage and automatic promotion restorations.

Check To Recovery.

A disturbing hint of Government competition in the private investment market is embodied in the offer of the RFC to lend the B. & O. Railroad $17,500,000 at lower net cost, as an alternative to a public note offering through established banking channels. The possibility that acceptance of the offer may be forced by a refusal of the RFC to renew another outstanding loan is likewise perturbing.

The Administration professes to be eager to bring about a revival of the market for new capital issues and the most promising field for expansion at the present time is offered by railroad financing. Obviously if the Government through the RFC tries to retain a privileged position as lender to the railroads, the hoped-for investment revival may not materialize. Competition between Governmental agencies, using public credit, and private agencies dependent upon investment support is essentially unfair, if not impossible.

As the result of the emergency, the Government has been forced to step in and provide capital that was not obtainable from private sources. Coincident with evidence that emergency financing needs are diminishing, the Government should progressively withdraw from this field in order to give private agencies an opportunity to function.

Investment demand for new capital issues is discouraged by official endeavors to cut rates of interest on long-time securities, regardless of the state of the market. Relatively low rates can, of course, be asked of borrowers by a Government which is itself in a privileged position as borrower, able to issue tax exempt obligations, and to avoid certain expenses and commissions entailed by private loan operations.

To attempt to depress interest charges, therefore, by undercutting a private financing agency, as the RFC is reported to have done in case of the B. & O., is doing the country a poor service. Such tactics tend to increase the public debt instead of diminishing the burdens on Treasury agencies. They tend to perpetuate the need for Government assistance and to delay indefinitely the hoped-for revival of normal business activity.

The surest way to hasten that revival is for the Government to remove obstacles to private flotations on terms that attract prospective investors. Funds will then be shifted into diversified channels and the existing abnormal dependence upon Government credit will be correspondingly reduced.

Costs And Politics.

The game of guessing how much money the Seventy-third Congress has spent, appropriated, or pledged goes merrily forward. A few days ago Representative Taber presented estimates showing that during the two sessions Congress had incurred obligations which might exceed $22,000,000,000, of which sum $17,600,000,000 was voted during the second session. Now the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee states that appropriations for normal and emergency purposes amounted to only $7,500,000,000 during the second session.

Representative Bolton, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, offers a rival estimate purporting to show that Congress appropriated nearly $12,000,000,000 during the second session, and nearly $19,000,000,000 for both sessions. By adding to this sum contingent obligations estimated at $8,000,000,000, a grand total of $27,000,000,000 is reached, to which, Representative Bolton says, "must be added the amounts involved in all of the unlimited authorizations as such definite sums are provided."

If the Democrats spend their time trying to minimize the size of the Administration's spending program, and the Republicans devote their talents to magnifying it, the public will be left utterly bewildered and uninformed as to the real situation. With the best of will, it is impossible to determine what the Seventy-third Congress will cost the American people, because authorizations to spend do not necessarily mean that spending will be pushed to the limit. Moreover, "contingent liabilities, which swell estimates to the imposing figures cited by critics of the spending program, are not deadweight burdens upon the taxpayer. Certainly authorizations to pledge the public credit or to make loans are not always followed by exercise of the powers conferred.

Any of the widely differing estimates, therefore, may be justified. Yet all of them are worthless unless it is made clear what items are included and why other items are excluded. The taxpayer is interested at present in knowing the amount of funds that will actually be spent in excess of estimated receipts. The contingent liabilities concern him only remotely, if at all. On the other hand, those who are worried over the extent to which Government credit is being employed not only to finance budgetary deficits, but also to take the place of private capital, wish to know the full amount of public commitments—actual, probable, and problematical.

Those genuinely desirous of warning the public about the dangers of unwise spending ought to give up playing politics with appropriation estimates and settle down to a patient and sincere effort to make the figures comprehensible. To date spokesmen for both parties have largely wasted their time, trying to discredit the statements of their opponents.

Purity Or Pollution?

It is appropriate that the PWA should make funds available for purification of the Potomac on the very day that New York stops dumping garbage off the New Jersey coast. The pollution of rivers, lakes and coastal waters by large cities has long been a source of annoyance and disease. Thanks to the PWA, quite a number of communities are now converting foul streams and bays into healthful places of recreation.

Of all the urgent projects for which the District Commissioners have sought funds from the Public Works Administration they consider the proposed sewage disposal plant at Blue Plains the most important. Surveys have shown that the Potomac is unfit for bathing. Even fish can not survive in parts of the river just below the sewage outlets. Washington has almost destroyed the recreational value of this historic and beautiful stream by steadily transforming it into an open sewer.

Four years may be required to construct the proposed $8,000,000 plant. In the meantime this insanitary condition will doubtless be aggravated. Yet a start has been made. The Commissioners and friends of the District in Congress, as well as the PWA, are richly entitled to community gratitude for their tireless efforts to bring this project to consummation.

New York is putting into operation four new incinerators to take the place of barges used to strew the garbage of that metropolis on the waves that wash New Jersey's beaches. For several years officials of that State have tried to put a stop to this crude practice. But it was only after an investigation launched by the Supreme Court had shown that the great city on the Hudson was creating a public nuisance that action was taken. New York put her incinerators in operation just in time to escape a $5,000-per-day penalty fixed by the court.

Pollution of rivers and beaches in densely populated areas is literally a foul practice. In this age of public health and sanitary engineering there is no excuse for its continuation. The PWA has done well to give special attention to projects designed to modernize sewage disposal. If Secretary Ickes can induce neighboring Virginia communities to fall into line with the campaign to purify the Potomac, the people of this section will be doubly grateful.

Cops And Coats.

New York has got itself all worked up into a lather over whether its police should be allowed to unbutton their collars and shed their coats on the hot summer days. Gen. O'Ryan, military head of The Finest, is quite insistent that they should not. He seems to be taking a lone stand in the matter, but lone or not, he is the chief of the police and his word is final. Mayor LaGuardia and the Board of Estimate agree with the police, that when it's hot it's hot and a coat is not to be worn, even if one is a policeman.

Why such a simple thing as deciding that even New York police are human beings should be made such a difficult matter is hard to understand. Washington police have not worn coats in summer for several years and the only people known to complain are not to be found here during the dog days. Nobody has ever suggested that our police are less capable in July than December, and it is certain that they enjoy sweeter tempers in the summer than they would if they were forced to wear full uniform. Of course, they are occasionally taken for bus drivers or messenger boys, but a good cop soon sets those mistakes right.

Gen. O'Ryan should remember that he is not commanding an army, but merely an organization of police officers. Their function is not to merely enforce the law. It is also to preserve the peace of the community. And if a man is less comfortable and less cool than the rest of the citizens, his temper ill accords with preservation of peace.

While we would not go so far as to suggest that O'Ryan's men be dressed in black shirts, we do think he might let The Finest wear either blue or gray. They would be just as efficient, just as handsome, and just as recognizable as they are now. After all, a badge looks as formidable on a shirt as a coat, and a gun on the hip is rather more impressive when not covered by coattails. New York police are none of our business, of course. But in this weather we hate to see a city we admire get unnecessarily excited about anything.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE MURDER OF Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg at Sarajevo, by the Servian, Gavrio Prinzip, created a tense situation between the two countries which, prior to the assassination, had been on none too friendly terms.

SECRETARY WILSON of the Department of Labor said, "The welfare of the laboring class is the greatest living question that confronts not only this but every other country. Take care of labor and the country is bound to be prosperous and the people happy."

A RECORD-BREAKING heat wave which had lasted for a week was broken when a violent electrical storm, which lasted five hours, deluged the city. Bolts hit three houses, two of which were set ablaze, street car service was tied up and many telephone wires were severed.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

A FEW OF THE OUTSTANDING points in the Democratic platform which was adopted amid wild chaos were: The Republican party was described as the tool of special interest, and was denounced for "corruption" in office; the Democrats pledged "honesty" in Government; faithful compliance with the spirit of civil service, and its extension to internal revenue officers; "adequate" salaries for postal employes; immediate independence for the Philippines; promotion of deep waterways from the Great Lakes to the Gulf and the Atlantic Ocean; enactment of legislation dealing with fraudulent stock sales and enforcement of laws against monopolies and illegal combinations.

We Are Greatly Encouraged.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many thanks for your heartening editorial in The Post June 26 regarding those who scoff at those who see whales when and where whales are to be seen—even off the coast of New Jersey. Meanwhile those of us who know whales when we see them must patiently bear the scorns and jeers of skeptics who never saw a whale, but would probably be the first to mistake a bush for a bear. Now, I have seen whales, of various kinds, in various degrees of solitude or of aggregation, and once——

You will have to pardon the romantic setting, which, in spite of my best efforts, begets a certain romantic flavor in the telling, but the facts were these: 'Twas off no blue Canary Isles, but a mere 24 hours out of New York Harbor, on a summer evening of 1902. The good ship Kaiser Wilhelm de Grosse was ploughing her way through a sea so tranquil as to mirror the glory of the sunset. Most of the passengers were below at dinner. One other man and I had remained on deck, reluctant to leave the fascination of the scene. And then the great thing happened. Whales! Then more whales, and more, until it veritably seemed that the ocean was full of whales, plunging and blowing their way along in a general northeasterly direction, a sight never to be forgotten. They were on every side of us, and apparently undisturbed by the great ship. Of course, we reported the event to our fellow passengers, and, of course we were jeered for our pains. People have been cocking incredulous eyebrows at me ever since. But I saw those whales!

Thanks, too, for your serenely open mind on the even more challenging question of the sea serpent. No, I do not pretend ever to have seen one. But I have hopes. Who knows?

There may be creatures in the sea,
Horatio,
Undreamed of yet in in ichthyology.

From Cards to Cans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many people do not seem to know the science of preparing food fit for human beings to eat. Often I am invited to eat with friends, and the women instead of preparing well-balanced, hot, nourishing meals, with thought to combinations that do not clash, will get a can opener and serve canned food instead of fresh vegetables and fruits. They then run over to the corner delicatessen store and get a few slices of cold ham and some cold potato salad, put it on the table and call it a meal.

Often housewives will play cards until about five minutes before they know their husbands are due home from work and then they rush into the kitchen and open a can or two, and with the cold delicatessen food, manage to get what they are pleased to term a meal together in five minutes. A few women of the old school are good cooks, but many live out of cans and on delicatessen foods today, especially the bridge addicts, who only stop playing cards at the last minute to hurl together a makeshift meal. Cover-to-Cover Readers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I returned home after a month's absence and found the family had saved for me the anniversary number of The Post.

I desire to congratulate you upon this number and upon the wonderful work you have done in building up, in so short a time, a paper with such a wide National influence. All of the members of my family read it every day from cover to cover.

"The Red Network."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with keenest interest a recent article published in your paper listing prominent men and women whose names appear in the book entitled "The Red Network."

Doubtless, many who join one or more of the organizations referred to have been intrigued to do so through their mad ambition to elbow against and mingle with those who are potential socially or financially prominent, little realizing they are joining hands with groups whose foreign propaganda and chief aim is to tear down our dear old Stars and Stripes and raise a Red flag there, robbing us of the liberty for which our forefathers fought and died and left to us to defend.

True patriots in these United States should rejoice that one lone woman has had the courage to bring from under cover these names and give to the public the valuable information concerning organizations so cleverly clothed in subtle titles and "initials." I am sure some day the value of this information will be recognized.

I wish to thank you for having on your staff Mr. Carlisle Bargeron, whose clever writings I eagerly look for every morning.

A DEFENDER OF OUR COUNTRY.
Washington, June 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a constant reader of your valuable paper, may I also, with Pro Bono Publico Americano, of Berwyn, Md., say the newspapers make light of and try to laugh off the Red Book of Mrs. Dilling, giving the Who's Who in the U. S. A. and in U. S. S. R., but there are many men and women in this city who know she is rendering a valuable service to our country.

Mrs. Dilling's book is all too true. The sad thing is that we are to be disillusioned about those in whom we had faith and trusted. It is too bad that her book can not be put into the hands of all Americans.

Hot Weather Tips.

As I am not a doctor of medicine, I can not make any suggestions from a professional point of view; nevertheless I would like to offer what I consider two good preventives of heat prostration, as follows:

1. It is my firm conviction that smoking heavily in the heat of a July or August hot sun has a depressing effect on the system and renders a person more easily liable to sunstroke. I am a smoker myself. Although I have never been sun-struck, I have often experienced some very unpleasant sensations from smoking under the rays of a hot sun.

2. The umbrella is a great protection not only from the rain but from the rays of the sun. Women wisely carry the offspring of this useful article, and are protected from scorching heat, whereas men, for fear of being considered unmanly, refrain from this protection. Let us wave aside these foolish, preconceived prejudices, ignoring the scoff of youths who find pleasure in childish trifles, and let us use every legitimate means to safeguard our health, not only for our own sakes, but for those of our families.

The "Marriage" Clause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent correspondent of The Post, who, strange as it may seem, claimed to be for the masses, not classes, referred to cases where the salary of husband and wife (presumably in the Government service) totals $6,000 or $7,000. Maybe so, but for each case there are 99 where the salary is less than half that amount, or barely enough for the common necessities. But the couples I refer to are not now in the service, the wife or husband having been fired.

The law does not take from an individual with a large salary and no family, but it does from a husband and wife with a small salary and a large family. It takes from husband and wife regardless of qualification or fitness, which is the basis or foundation of what was our civil service system, but not from any other two, differently related. The law does not give a job to the unemployed, but it separates individuals from the work for which they are trained, and at the same time deprives many other needy people of employment.

This law should be condemned and despised by all real Americans, because it is the sort of legislation that defeats our National purpose, and is therefore a creature of erratic government, the underlying cause of our National distress.

On the Chigger.

We shall permit Mr. Webster to describe the hero of our discussion. He does so as follows:

"Chigoe, chigre: A species of flea (Sarcopsylla penetrans) common in the West Indies and South America and introduced into other tropical regions. Called also chigger and jigger. The fertile female burrows under the skin of the foot or other exposed part of the body of man and animals, and, becoming distended with eggs, causes serious and sometimes fatal sores."

We believe it will be agreed that this represents a calm and dispassionate account. Certainly others, including most of the victims of Sarcopsylla penetrans, have said it more eloquently. To supplement Mr. Webster, we will say that the chigoe, or chigger, as we know him, is found in the Southern United States, including the Ozark region of Missouri. He awaits the unwary by the millions in every cluster of scrub-oak; to sit on a log invites a major invasion; even to walk mincingly in the grass is not without its perils. Let a person saunter to the summit of an Ozark hill to invite his soul, and it is only a question of hours before philosophic calm gives way to acute physical unhappiness.

Are there remedies for chigger bites? Has mankind taken up arms against this insidious creature, who, upon examination through a microscope, makes a dreadnaught look as harmless as a pleasure boat? There are literally a thousand remedies, ranging from anointing the skin with fat-back to saturating the human body with sulphur. The only ones that are effective cause almost as much discomfort as Prof. Chigoe, himself; others might work if they were let alone, but who has the moral courage and Spartan fortitude not to scratch a chigger bite? In short, at this stage of the battle between man and the chigger, the latter is winning easily on points.

Let someone appear who can rid us of the chigger and he will rank with the immortals.

The Post Impressionist

"The Uses of Adverse-ity."

Postoffice, Friday.

ACCORDING to the latest reports in our letter-box, Hearvey Allen's lean, but lengthy—"historic," but not uniformly accurate—"Anthony Adverse" continues to sell. Indeed, its publishers lately intimated that it continues best selling—or pretty nearly, anyhow—near enough to suit any save the most avarcious.

And who will doubt a publisher? Here, then, is a roomy romance about an elder era, which, like it or not, as you may, meets some sort of large demand. What does this phenomenon portend?

Well, there are a couple of answers thus far recorded. Chiefly, it rouses two kinds of critics to two kinds of assertion.

The one sort of critic says that A. A.'s popularity simply shows a desire for false history sentimentally presented. The other sort of critic says that, if we don't, as a Nation, stop buying "Anthony Adverse," we shall let ourselves in for a hard next-winter of old-fashioned-length novels.

As to any continued demand, any assured "salability," for very bulky fiction, the Post-Impressionist confesses considerable doubt.

We are quite mindful of the attitude of Michel Eyquem, Montaigne, who begged a friend: "Forgive this long letter—for I have not time to write a short one." But to sell well a novel must be even easier to read than to write; the long novel—and the long poem, too—must possess even something besides greatness: it has to possess, and it has to transmit, a sense of leisure. This sense of ease is daily harder to find.

Indeed, it is rare in the very classics themselves, which may explain why too few of us read them: All the popular quotations from "Don Quixote" will be found in that stupendous work's first 150 pages. Isn't it significant that nine out of every ten among the familiar lines in "Paradise Lost" occur before tumbling Lucifer strikes bottom?

We do not believe that "Anthony Adverse" won his large audience upon his merits as a whole. Aboard every Pullman car you will still see at least one girl doggedly reading his chronicle. But, if you have a better eye for the book than for the girl, you will note that she is still several degrees north of due east in her course among its pages.

Nevertheless, the poet sings truly when he sings:

"Sweet are the uses of Adversity!" Romance the contemporary world does demand. Not that, as Mr. George Jean Nathan contends, and as we have elsewhere remarked, the screen-and-stage popularity of "Alice in Wonderland" proves this desire. "Alice" isn't romance. She is delightful nonsense, and therefore has an attractive trifle in common with much of our late realism. "Alice" could be used as an argument for bigger and bolder Erskine Caldwells. Today's fiction addicts want romance for the same reason that, ever since the first hard times of history, readers have wanted this "drowsy syrup of the East:" like certain economists, they want to dream away the depression.

And a lot they care whether the historical romances which best supply their demand have authentic background or pseudo!

Which naively brings us back to the first sort of critic we mentioned—and to Mr. Hervey Allen's anachronisms. Wel, it seems to us this sort of critic has missed the most egregious among Anthony's historic blunders. Nobody has yet detected his ability to read the future. Mr. Allen makes his young man, in Paris, gaze upon the Pont de Jena several years before there was fought that Battle of Jena which gave the bridge its name.

But, as Ring Lardner once so wisely said, "Oh, yeah?" Long ago we discovered the danger of challenging an author in these matters. We called down John Masefield because one of his sea captains, in the days of the Jamestown settlement, "called-down" an able seaman. Masefield wrote us:

"I think you will find that the phrase is not Nineteenth Century slang, but has been 400 years in use afloat. When a sailor bungles things aloft, he is, and thus long has been, 'called down' to the deck for reprimand."

After all, Mr. Allen is not alone in his tendency to slipping. There's "Ivanhoe," no less: erudite Sir Walter sins against heraldry; inventing a coat-of-arms for Sir Brian, he "places metal on metal" in one of the quarterings. Didn't the elder Dumas adorn Richelieu's forefinger with a bishop's ring? And to what side show did realistic Trollope's Andy belong when he "came whistling up the drive with a cigar in his mouth?"

Let the critics quarrel. A good story is a good story whether it be short or long, whether its sun rises in the east or west. To be sure, we ourselves haven't read "Anthony Adverse"—we don't believe we should think it a good story if we did read it. But we hope Mr. Allen keeps on getting rich out of it, anyhow.

'When Zephyr Gently Blows.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A writer in a recent issue of The Post made the statement that men do not shed their coats in hot weather. This is only partially true. I know of many men who do shed their coats in hot weather, and I know of many who do not. Those who do not usually are those who come from the West, and especially those from Iowa.

To an Easterner this seems strange, but to a Westerner there is nothing strange about it. If an Iowan shows an undue attachment for his coat on a hot day, it is because he does not like to chase it after it has been blown away by a breeze that an Easterner would call a storm.

The New Deal in the Textbooks.

FOR more years than I can tell our Presidents have apparently recognized that as an organization builder the multiple commissions, committees, agencies or boards were pretty hard to beat. Every four years we have the spectacle of all the Democrats, generally speaking, voting for the Democratic Presidential candidate, and all the Republicans voting for the Republican one. There are notable exceptions, of course, such as when the Republicans in great numbers vote for the Democratic candidate.

BARGERON.

Then there are exceptions in normal years when any number of men and women vote for the candidate of the opposition party because they served on one of his commissions.

"I am a life-long Democrat," any number of these people said in connection with Mr. Hoover, "but I am too closely related to him. I served on his commission to study this and that."

* * * *

It was thought that Mr. Hoover had brought commissions up to their greatest vogue since the commission business first saw the light of day. Mr. Roosevelt has far excelled him, however, and notwithstanding that he used to laugh as heartily about Mr. Hoover's commissions as anyone else. Mr. Roosevelt, of course, calls them bureaus and boards, and anything except commissions. They are, however, the same.

The apprehension has been expressed by Republicans and by some Democrats who do not like the way things are going, that the organization the present Administration is building up through the tremendous expenditure of public funds and the tremendous army of jobholders, full and part time, will make it utterly impossible ever to dislodge them.

* * * *

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's commissions are as amusing as anything Mr. Hoover ever set up. There is, for example, the widely publicized Delano or National Planning Board, which is to chart all of our National resources with a view to putting "human beings first" in this great fabric of ours. I don't think there has been a time in our history, certainly not in my time, when some Government agency was not making such a chart or study. Furthermore, Congress only a few years ago appropriated $12,000,000, I believe it was, for just such a study by the War Department. It has been completed and my understanding is that the Delano board made full use of it in its great research.

If there is any conceivable subject with which there isn't exhaustive data in the governmental archives hereabouts, I should like to know what it is.

Yet some of our erudite gentlemen of the Treasury are to go to England this summer to study the English tax system. Also, we are told, a professor is on his way here to study the tariff. What the Tariff Commission has been doing all these years is something else.

* * * *

Where Mr. Roosevelt far excels former Presidents in political astuteness or in commission-appointing, however, is the play he is giving the professors in his scheme of things. They are already scattered throughout the Government. This summer, it seems, we are to be loaded up with them. Now the great majority of these gentlemen are on leave from their schools. In the fall they will go back there to teach.

It stands to reason that they won't teach unfriendly to the New Deal. They will, instead, be imbued with its soundness, its unselfish devotion to what Sir Thomas More called the "body weal." There is no man who thinks higher of a particular Administration than the one who gets a job with it. At least this is true of educated men such as the professors are. Among the workers there is lots of biting of the hand that feeds them, but not among professors.

There have been some sly attempts to get the New Deal philosophy into the textbooks. Failing in this, the employment of the professors this summer is about as effective as anything can be.

Vacation Compulsion.

The summer time is here—
The days are hot,
And I must find a place
To think they're not.

I have a home that's cool,
Quite cool, indeed—
But I must get a change
I do not need.

My bed is very soft,
The mattress deep,
So I must rent a place
Where I can't sleep.

My rooms are airy, too;
My ceilings high,
So I must leave them flat—
I don't know why.

My windows are all screened
From fly and gnat,
And naturally I Can't stand for that!

Go fetch the papers, lad,
And let me see
Where I can go and live
In misery!

Some seaside bungalow
With jetty bells,
Some people I don't like,
And clammy smells.

The view I get in town's
A splendid one,
But I must go away
Where there is none.

A shack up in the hills
With noises strange . . .
It's quiet where I live—
I need a change!

A cottage by a lake,
That's what I seek;
I'm tired of a home
That doesn't leak.

A little country house
With pump and well . . .
In some secluded spot
(As hot as hell!)

I'm happy here at home,
But customs quaint
Decree that I must go
Where comfort ain't.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Eluding the watchfulness of hospital attendants, 8-year-old Charles Barker, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Barker, Great Cacapon, Morgan County, disappeared some time early this morning and tonight was still being sought.

Police were enlisted in the search. The child was wearing a blue short and trousers of brownish color, was hatless and barefoot. His hair is light and eyes match.

Rorty Tilts at Advertising

AFTER 20 years of advertising practice, James Rorty looks upon the profession with a very jaundiced eye in the pages of "Our Master's Voice: Advertising" (John Day, $3). More, he speaks out in white-hot words which are likely to cause blisters among his colleagues and to give lay-readers a rise in temperature.

THEO. HALL.

This is not the first time Mr. Rorty has broken a lance in his all but single-handed crusade. His writings on the same subject have appeared in Harpers, the Nation, the New Republic, and (oddly enough) Printer's Ink—the house organ of the advertising business. Now he gathers his forces and sets out to commit, not murder, but massacre. I tell you it is a spectacle!

Mr. Rorty takes his cue from that indispensable social commentator, Thorstein Veblen, whose ironic observations, written a quarter-century ago, are just beginning to bite into the public mind. Briefly, Mr. Rorty accuses advertising, especially that in the magazines, of raising up a "pseudo-culture" based on "sheer emulative materialism as a way of life." A phrase from an editorial in arts and decoration stands as the unconscious reduction of this to absurdity. "Chromium is more expensive than no chromium," stated the editorial gravely. ("And a vote for Wintergreen is a vote for Wintergreen," adds Mr. Rorty.)

* * * *

Mr. Rorty's mood is an old combination of wrath and resignation, mingled with guffaws. His picture of a day in an advertising agency and his pen portraits of Barnum, Elbert Hubbard, and Bruce Barton are scarcely solemn. His view of the situation as a whole is that nothing can be much changed while society remains in its present state. Nowhere does he get hotter under the collar (though time and again he gets almost as hot) than in his scarification of the lobby which smothered the Tugwell food and drug bill.

If Mr. Rorty's book seems a bit one-sided (he fails to give due credit to the legitimate styles and functions of advertising), it nevertheless remains a piece of shrewd and hard-hitting criticism. The type of reader who is a subscriber to Consumer's Research and enjoyed "100,000,000 Guinea Pigs" will be delighted with this book. The reader who, like Candide, thinks this the best of all possible worlds, will be bewildered if not saddened. But no one who wishes to look at his surroundings with intelligence can afford to ignore the point of Mr. Rorty's fulminations.

* * * *

As a change from detective-fiction, mystery story addicts will welcome Leonard R. Gribble's "Famous Feats of Detection and Detection" (Doublelady Doran, $2.50). Here are eleven actual case histories from France, Belgium, England, and America, narrating the successes of some of the world's most noted detectives. Mr. Gribble, who has written three mystery yarns, gleaned the material from memoirs by the detectives themselves, from biographies, and from criminological histories. He lists these sources, so if you're interested you can go on to wider reading in the field.

The exploits range from the capture of some brigands by M. Vidocq, Napoleon's chief of police and founder (1812) of the great French detective bureau, the Surete Generale, to the solution by Chief Inspector Prothero, Scotland Yard, of the memorable Southampton Garage Murder in 1929. Though most of the cases go back into fairly ancient history (such as the grisly Voirbo case solved by M. Mace in 1869), readers with a memory for crime will recall the Keller trunk murder in Philadelphia (1915), the laboratory explosion in Berkeley known as the Schwartz case (1925), and the murdered English constable, Guteridge (1927).

If your knowledge of detective work comes only from fiction, you will be astonished by these accounts of actual practice. For theoretical deduction amounts to scarcely 5 per cent of the total effort. Suppose a gold-headed cane, not belonging to the dead man, is found by the body. The police spend no time in the pleasant fiction manner of deducing that it was carried by a tall, red-headed man with false teeth and a cast in one eye. No—they send out their agents to inquire all over town if anybody saw a man with such a cane. Patience and more patience is the way. Surprisingly, it works.

"The Emerald Murder Trap," by Jackson Gregory (Scribner, $2). An eccentric millionaire invites suspects and sleuths on a house party, baits the trap with a $50,000 emerald, and gets more action than he reckoned for. An unusual and corking mystery.

"Mr. Pinkerton Goes to Scotland Yard," by David Frome (Farrar & Rinehart, $2). Inspector Bull and his mild little landlord, Evan Pinkerton, get mixed up in some murders which Scotland Yard would ordinarily have called natural deaths. Lots of character painting, but with a tight and workmanlike plot to bear the burden. Highly pleasing.

The National Gallery

GEORGE EDWARD ALLEN, District Commissioner. Native of Booneville, Miss., he came here five years ago to manage Wardman Park Hotel after wide experience in hostelry management and practice of law. Married Washington girl. Expert punter, Cumberland University's grid team. Served overseas as lieutenant. Dark horse protege of Senator Pat Harrison, he knows more members of Congress than any District Commissioner before him. Vigorous, young, capable, he framed local liquor law, settled carpenters' strike, and reorganized welfare system. Oft seen on golf green, seldom at pink teas. Husky, exuberant, fond of telling stories on self. Likes good Democrats and true.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

If Loose Stock Did No Damage There Would Be No Fences

By Robert Quillen

In the time of our fathers, prudent parents made plans to get their daughters "married off" early.

The expression was never amplified or analyzed, but marriage meant that the girl was "safe." She might not be happy, but at least she was shielded from indiscretion.

Certain tribes in Africa and elsewhere achieve the same end by separating the sexes. The boys live in one community house and the girls in another until adult wisdom mates them.

Always and everywhere the institution of marriage has been threatened by the frailty of human nature. Religion and ethical rules and social taboos have combined to control the mating instinct and require it to conform to expedient and necessary restrictions.

Modern youth, encouraged by childless and abnormal troublemakers, has to some extent got out of control.

Trial marriages and arrangements even more frankly immoral have become common enough to threaten the Nation's standards of decency.

That promiscuous or illicit sex adventure is indecent, no understanding person can deny. By violating necessary convention it proves itself in bad taste and therefore vulgar and "common." And even the most brazen party to it feels some shame and some loss of respectability.

The excuse for it is plausible, but not sound.

Those who advocate "surrender to natural impulse" (as though a child's natural impulse to steal justifies theft) argue that nature prompts mating in youth, now as always, while our new economic scheme makes it difficult for youth to marry. Therefore the maiden must mate without benefit of clergy or marry an old man without love for the sake of his money.

And that is bosh. If the young are in love, let them marry. You say they can't afford it. Why not?

Will they eat any more or wear any more after marriage? They will continue to live, married or single, will they not?

Then let them marry and live on as they now live until they can set up shop for themselves. To "live on" their parents after marriage may hurt their pride, but that is a little hurt compared with sacrificing character.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning died at Florence, Italy, on June 29, 1861. Her grave is in the Protestant Cemetery at Florence, where are also buried two other famous English poets—Walter Savage Landor and Arthur Hugh Clough. Two famous Americans lie in the same hallowed place—Richard Hildreth, the great historian, and Theodore Parker, the great pulpit orator of Boston.

Her own poem, called "A Child's Grave at Florence," contains words that fittingly describe her own burial:

And here, among the English tombs,
In Tuscan ground we lay her,
While the blue Tuscan sky endomes
Our English words of prayer.

With the exception of some fragments ascribed to the Greek poet Sappho, it is perhaps true that the poetry of Mrs. Browning, especially her "Sonnets From the Portuguese," is the greatest ever written by a woman.

Robert Browning wrote the following account of her last moments to Miss Haworth:

My dear Friend: I well know you feel as you say, for her once and for me now. Isa Blagden, perfect in all kindness to me, will have told you something perhaps—and one day I shall see you and be able to tell you myself as much as I can. The main comfort is that she suffered very little pain, none beside that ordinarily attending the simple attacks of cold and cough she was subject to—had no presentiment of the result whatever, and was consequently spared the misery of knowing she was about to leave us; she was smilingly assuring us she was "better," "quite comfortable—if I would but come to bed," to within a few minutes of the last. I think I foreboded evil at Rome, certainly from the beginning of the week's illness—but when I reasoned about it, there was no justifying fear—she said on the last evening, "it is merely the old attack, not so severe a one as that of two years ago—there is no doubt I shall soon recover," and I talked over plans for the summer, and next year. I sent the servants away and her maid to bed—so little reason for disquietude did there seem. Through the night she slept heavily, and brokenly—that was the bad sign—but then she would sit up, take her medicine, say unrepeatable things to me and sleep again. At 4 o'clock there were symptoms that alarmed me. I called the maid and sent for the doctor. She smiled as I proposed to bathe her feet. "Well, you are determined to make an exaggerated case of it!" Then came what my heart will keep till I see her again and longer—the most perfect expression of her love to me within my whole knowledge of her. Always smilingly, happily, and with a face like a girl's—and in a few minutes she died in my arms; her head on my cheek. These incidents so sustain me that I tell them to her beloved ones as their right; there was no lingering, nor acute pain, nor consciousness of separation, but God took her to himself as you would lift a sleeping child from the dark, uneasy bed into your arms and the light. Thank God.

Waynesboro Veteran Will Be Buried Today

Waynesboro, Pa., June 28 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow at 2 p. m. for Samuel C. Weaver, 88, one of the two remaining Civil War veterans in Waynesboro, who died Tuesday. Death was due to arthritis and a heart condition.

A native of Franklin County, Mr. Weaver enlisted with Company L, Twenty-first Pennsylvania Cavalry, shortly before his eighteenth birthday. At the end of his enlistment he reenlisted for another term near the end of the war with Company M, 102d Pennsylvania Infantry.

Two Felons Escape, One Is Recaptured

Prisoners Saw Way Out of Clarksburg Jail.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 28 (Spl.). Two convicts awaiting transportation to Moundsville sawed their way out of the Harrison County Jail here early today, but one of them was recaptured shortly before noon in a suburb.

Still at large is Austin Bond, 34, of Jarvisville, who had been sentenced to serve 17 years for armed robbery of a pumping station at Maken. The one recaptured at Union Heights by Sheriff Fitzhugh Reynolds and a deputy is Preston Sexton, 36, of Alabama, sentenced to ten years for the armed robbery of an inn near Bridgeport.

Under pretext of taking a bath the men went into the hospital room of the jail, where they sawed bars, dropped to a passageway and fled.

Hagerstown Urged To Buy Incinerator

Health Aid Says Old City Dump Is Menace.

Hagerstown, Md., June 28 (Spl.). The city dump, where rubbish from Hagerstown is deposited, would be abolished and an incinerator purchased, under recommendations made by Dr. W. Ross Cameron, health officer, to the street commissioners.

The officer said the time has arrived when the dump must be abandoned, pointing out that some months ago the State department of health and an engineering concern had so recommended, holding that such purchase of an incinerator at a cost of about $50,000 would be more economical and sanitary than additional land for a dump.

City officials will meet later to discuss the recommendation.

Hagerstown Police Ban Night Parking

Hagerstown, Md., June 28 (Spl.). Police launched a war on motorists who park on streets all night. Nearly all of the 127 whose cars were tagged stormed police headquarters to find Police Capt. Clarence Emmert determined to break up the practice. They had to pay the usual $1 fine.

Emmert says that streets have to remain dirty because streets are cluttered with parked cars. He will continue to enforce the law, said Emmert.

Reemployment Office Closing Is Protested

Fredericksburg Citizens Told Economy Called for Curtailment.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—The delegation of local civic and business leaders who yesterday conferred with Frank Cavedo, reemployment director for Virginia, were instructed that economies essential to the continued operation of the reemployment service necessitate the closing of the district office in this city.

Benjamin T. Pitts, president of the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce, headed the delegation, which remained in conference with Cavedo in his Richmond office more than an hour. Cavado explained in detail the necessity of curtailing expenses, and said the movement here was in harmony with a general policy of entrenchment and would interfere with the efficiency of operation only to a limited extent.

The delegation opposed abolition of the local headquarters on the ground that traveling expenses under the new plan would amount to as much as salaries under the present plan. Cavedo asserted this would not be the case.

The district office, of which E. W. Koontz is director, will be abolished under the new plan. The counties of Stafford, Spotsylvania, King George, Caroline and Westmoreland will be handled from the Fredericksburg local office, of which Everett S. Cole is director. Counties in the southern part of the Third District will be placed under the Newport News office, headquarters of District Six, while the northern counties of old Third District will be cared for from the Alexandria headquarters of District One.

Miss Peggy Carter will continue in her position as assistant to Cole, but Koontz, and his assistant, Mrs. John O. Cosby, will retire from the service.

Those accompanying Pitts to Richmond were the Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, of the Fredericksburg Methodist Church; J. J. Garner, James Ashby, clerk of the Stafford Circuit Court; W. B. F. Cole, Commonwealth's attorney of Fredericksburg; T. Benton Gayle, superintendent of Stafford County schools, and Chester B. Goolrick.

Virginia County To Refund Debts

Norton, Va., June 28 (AP).—Wise County debts will be studied at a debt parley with bondholders sitting around a table with county officials and business men at Wise courthouse Friday, July 20. The call for the meeting was issued in letters sent out by J. B. Wampler, county treasurer.

In his letter, Mr. Wampler pointed out that "we have done everything in our power to protect the good credit that our county has always enjoyed, but we find that it is impossible for us to continue to meet maturities of our bonds, and pay the interest at the present rate, until there is an improvement in business conditions sufficient to establish property values."

The general plan Mr. Wampler will propose to bondholders is to refund all county issues in one new issue, and reduce the interest rate within the ability of the county to pay without levying a prohibitive tax rate so high as to impair the value of all property.

Virginia Crop Pay Totals $1,036,220

Richmond, June 28 (Spl.).—Crop benefit payments to Virginia farmers reached a total of $1,036,220 on June 20, and will total more than $2,000,000 by the end of the summer, when the corn-hog payments are completed, it was learned today.

In Virginia wheat payments have totaled $371,045; corn and hog payments thus far, $2,230; 1933 cotton, $130,327; 1934-35, cotton thus far, $43,335, and tobacco, $489,283.

Virginia Governor Rests in Seclusion

Richmond, June 28 (AP).—A heavy press of official business, coupled with temperatures which have hovered close to 100 for days, sent Gov. George C. Perry to seclusion today.

The governor was reported "indisposed" at his office in the capitol. It was stated that he was resting at the executive mansion. He was unable to attend the James Madison memorial celebration at Montpelier today.

Railroad Blames Autoists' Failure To Obey Signals

Roanoke, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Motorists driving into the sides of trains accounted for 27 per cent of all grade-crossing accidents on the Norfolk & Western Railway system last year, the general offices here announce.

A recent check made at a number of protected crossings on the railway showed that of the total number of automobile drivers who arrived at the crossings after the warning signals had begun to operate and before the trains reached the crossings, 61 per cent continued to cross the tracks "in utter disregard of the warning," the statement declared.

The grade-crossing toll on the Norfolk & Western in 1933 was 6 killed and 37 injured. Such accidents, however, have decreased 61 per cent during the past five years, the railway says.

Virginia to Get Police Radio Cars

Richmond, June 28 (Spl.).—A radio police net for the Richmond area became assured today with authorization by the Governor for installation of short-wave receivers in 48 State police cars. An unexpected balance of about $4,000 in the motor vehicle division is to be used to purchase equipment.

The equipment will enable police to keep in constant touch with commanding officers, and in cases of robbery and other crimes will make possible the construction of a complete cordon within a few seconds after the report comes in.

Leesburg Rotary Club Head Urges Beautification Drive

Leesburg, Va., June 28 (Spl.). The Rev. G. Peyton Craighill, in assuming his new duties as president of the Leesburg Rotary Club at the weekly luncheon yesterday, asked the club's cooperation in beautifying the north approach to Leesburg from the town limit for a half mile or a mile by planting dogwood trees.

The new president declared that the club would have the cooperation of the State highway department, the county agent, J. R. Lintner, and garden clubs. The speaker said that the State Highway Commission promised to plant the trees at its own expense, thus making cost of trees the only expense to the club.

Other officers installed were Lloyd Slack, retiring president, who automatically becomes vice president; Roscoe Rhoads, secretary; Shirley Myers, treasurer; and A. L. Chichester, sergeant-at-arms.

Miss Manly's Bridal Held At University

Mr. Walter O. Briggs, Jr., Marries Washington Debutante.

Ceremony Is Performed at Dahlgren Chapel, Georgetown.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

One of the Capital's loveliest debutantes, Miss Laura Bradley Manly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Manly, was married yesterday to Mr. Walter Owen Briggs, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Owen Briggs, of Detroit.

The ceremony was performed at 11 o'clock in the Dahlgren Chapel of Georgetown University by the Rev. John Kehoe, S. J. The Rev. Vincent McDennough, S. J., said the nuptial mass. Both the Rev. Kehoe and the Rev. McDennough were instructors of Mr. Briggs, who was graduated earlier this month from Georgetown University.

White summer flowers, mingled with ferns and palms, were used in the floral arrangements in the chapel. While the guests were assembling, Dr. Edgar Donovan, of Georgetown University, gave an organ recital.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a severely simple gown of white satin, fashioned with a high draped neckline, and long sleeves puffed slightly above the elbows and ending in a point over the hands. The long circular skirt formed a train, and the veil of tulle was caught with small clusters of orange blossoms.

Heirloom Handkerchief.

The bride carried a bouquet of yellow roses and gardenias, and a handkerchief of rare lace made by her great grandmother, the late Mrs. William Merriman, for the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Laura Bradley, and carried at her wedding. The bride of yesterday was named for her grandmother, who makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Manly, and who attended the wedding.

Mrs. Thomas P. Bones, jr., was the matron of honor, and wore a gown of pale yellow organza with a hat of the same shade fashioned after the off-the-face mode. She carried an arm bouquet of varicolored summer flowers. The bridesmaids were Mrs. William F. Connolly, jr., of Detroit, and Miss Betty Larimer, of Washington. They wore frocks styled like that of the matron of honor, in pale turquoise blue with hats to match, and carried arm bouquets of yellow roses.

Mr. Philip Hart, jr., of Philadelphia, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. William F. Connolly, jr., of Detroit; Mr. J. P. Sullivan, of New York; Mr. John Connolly, of Detroit, and Mr. Joseph Halpin, of Newark, N. J.

A reception and breakfast at the Carlton for the wedding guests followed the ceremony. The bridal couple stood before a screen of summer flowers to receive the guests. Mrs. Manly and Mrs. Briggs assisted them. Mrs. Manly wore a gown of brown chiffon with a large hat to match, and Mrs. Briggs was in a gown of beige with accessories to match, and both wore corsages of orchids.

Later Mr. Briggs and his bride left for New York. They will sail from there tomorrow on the Bremen for a month's stay in Europe, after which they will make their home in Detroit.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. Lee Hat, the bridegroom's brothers-in-law and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Fisher, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Dean Robinson, of Detroit; Mr. Robert Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Boyer, Judge and Mrs. William Connolly, jr., Mr. John Connolly, Mr. Walter Connolly, Mr. and Mrs. James Gaudie, all of Detroit; Mr. Fred R. Bay, Mr. Charles Manly Kendrick and Mr. R. P. Sullivan, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tod, of Youngstown, Ohio, and Mrs. Edward Watson, of Shreveport, La.

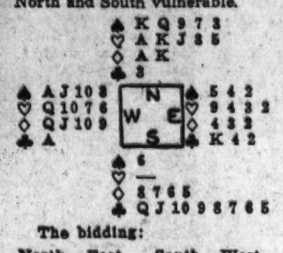
That Long Minor Suit.

Mr. Donald B. Kenner, of New York, wrote me recently requesting that I devote an article to a discussion of what to do with a long minor suit when partner has opened the bidding. The hand in question is one containing a suit eight cards in length, without support for any bid made by the Opening hand. Such holdings have in them the root of disaster because of the fact that partnership ears are not always so delicately attuned that they can get the undertone of distress in the repeated bidding of one suit and the inference that no other final declaration is possible. The hand which gave rise to the discussion and brought about a minor disaster was bid as follows:

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♠	Pass	1NT	Pass
2♡	Pass	3♣	Pass
3NT	Pass	4♣	Pass
4NT	Pass	5♣	Pass
6NT	Pass	6♣	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

In explanation of this odd bidding, Mr. Kenner says that his partner was one of those who insist upon Opening bids in the first position being power houses and in consequence wanf the bidding kept open very lightly; and that he also insists upon a notrump response unless the hand contains a trick and one-half. This explains the peculiar bid of notrump with an eight-card minor suit and no other strength in the hand.

Much better bidding on this hand would have been: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.):

North	East	South	West
1♠(1)	Pass	2♣(2)	Pass
3♡(3)	Pass	4♣(4)	Pass
4♡(5)	Pass	5♣(6)	Pass
Pass(7)	Pass

1—North has a reasonably close decision between opening with a bid of one and two. His two five-card major suits present a fair argument in favor of an Opening two-bid, but, after all, neither of them is very strong and probably the more conservative course is better.
2—Of course, South immediately begins the process of signing off.
3—Inasmuch as North did not force on the Opening round, his hand is so strong that he must force now. Therefore, the bid of three hearts is correct.
4—Again denying anything except a string of clubs.
5—North again seeks to force his partner to a choice between the two major suits.
6—Again denying even the slightest assistance for either of partner's bid suits.
7—North must respect his partner's repeated sign-offs. As a matter of fact, five clubs can be made unless West elects to open a spade, as the Ace and King of diamonds can be cashed, one diamond ruffed in Dummy, and the remaining diamond and the spade discarded on the Ace and Kind of hearts.

The question, however, is not one of the play of the hand, but of the bidding. It is one that frequently comes up, and that is about as often answered wrongly as rightly. Obviously, South's hand is worthless if played at anything else but clubs, but I do not believe that South was justified in bidding six. After all, on every misfit hand there must come a time when one partner or the other gives up.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Prima Donna Claims Right to Rheumatism

Lawrence, Kans., June 28 (AP).—A half century behind the footlights should entitle Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink to have her rheumatism occasionally without comment, the 73-year-old diva said last night.

She sang before 1,500 persons at the University of Kansas auditorium and before the curtain received callers in her dressing room.

The campus policeman was among the visitors, reminding her of her last appearance here, when he aided her to climb the steps while she was suffering with rheumatic troubles.

"I'm 73, and I've been on the stage 50 years and I have my right to have rheumatism occasionally," she replied.

Kelehers Visit Here as Guests Of M'Kenneys

Hosts Plan Supper Party Sunday to Honor Navy Couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic D. McKenney will entertain at an al fresco supper party Sunday evening at their country home, Handley Hall, near Kensington, Md., in honor of Commander and Mrs. Timothy J. Keleher, Commander and Mrs. Keleher will arrive in Washington tomorrow from Charleston, S. C., where they are stationed at the Navy Yard.

Commander and Mrs. Keleher were in Washington for a period of duty until their departure for the South more than a year ago, and have many friends in the Capital. They will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. McKenney over the Fourth of July.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. McKenney is one of the most charming near Washington, and there they entertain frequently at dinner and supper parties on the wide terrace of the rambling white house. Spreading lawns, handsome trees, and a rose-embowered garden make the place a delightful rendezvous for the young friends of the McKenney's daughters, Mrs. Frederica Mallan, who makes her home with her parents, and Mrs. Arthur Wallace Dunn, wife of Commander Dunn, who has recently returned to Handley Hall from Pittsburg where she has been for a fortnight with her husband. Commander Dunn will come to Washington for the week-end and will also remain over the Fourth.

Women Crash the High Salary Class in Post Office Department for First Time

Postmistress to Big City Job Make the Grade From Village

Postmaster Farley Is All Praise for Their Achievements; "Why We Even Call Them Postmaster Now," He Says, Eschewing the Feminine Title.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

FROM village postmistress to big city postmaster is a long, uphill road, but women have made the grade. With the appointment of one to the postmastership of Oakland, the third largest office in California, and another to the important Portland, Me. office, they have crashed the big salary class in the Postoffice Department for the first time in history. Postmaster General James A. Farley says of the feat:

"Once at the top, women will never regress. In their climb to Governmental strongholds as well as to industrial peaks, they've erased their tracks, sex and precedent, on the way up. Why we even call them 'postmaster' now—especially in the first-class offices. It was always 'postmistress' in the old days, when their jobs were less important."

In the highly developed art of postmastering stands Nellie G. Donohoe, appointed this month in Oakland, Calif., at a salary of $7,000 a year. The biggest job of this kind ever held by a woman. Miss Donohoe caters to the stamp-buying demands of 325,000 citizens. And she revels in it.

Not So Hard.

"It's delightfully interesting—this work of a postmaster," she says. "The problems here are many and varied. But I must confess, there is less difficulty in running this office than one finds in running an ordinary political campaign, or administering an active program of club work." Miss Donohoe has had wide experience in both.

But for the matter of a slight difference in spelling and $1,000 in salary, stands her counterpart in the Portland, Me., office, Postmaster Helen C. Donahue, who, on April 2, received this coverted reward over the competitive heads of many men applicants. In a town of more than 70,000, Miss Donahue draws a salary of $6,000.

Next in line is Postmaster Ellen J. Hederman, of Jackson, Miss., who was appointed a few weeks ago at a salary of $4,200; as Mrs. Floyd Cooper, who now postmasters to the tune of $4,000 a year in Amarillo, Tex. Nominated for these high positions by the President and passed on by the Senate, the first-class postmasters go into office with the blessings of high authority on their heads.

To those who wax technical on the subject of population as an index to classification, Postmaster General Farley says:

Not Sale, But Receipts.

"It isn't the size of the town so much, but the receipts of the postoffice that makes the job important. While Oakland and Portland are fairly large cities, there are other first-class appointments in comparatively smaller towns. These offices all do a large busines. and demand exceptionally capable executives as their heads."

There are many other women in the top ranks—more than 20 of them—who have been appointed since January. According to Mr. Farley, all the places haven't been filled. In the first class the salaries range from $3,200 on up the scale. In the three lower classes there are still greater numbers of women filling the role of postmaster.

In fact, women grown skillful at the Jack Horner game of politics, have, since the first of the year, drawn one-twentieth of these prize plums out of the Federal pie. This is said to be the largest percentage in the big-office class held by their sex in history.

Speaking of those in the upper bracket group, Postmaster General Farley declared:

"They'll make good, every one of them. Women, with their highly developed sense of public duty and natural conscientiousness, usually measure up to full stature in important places. Those given first class postmasterships are, without exception, outstanding women, with records of achievement behind them."

Now— in the Old Days.

There are those, however, who remember when today's political plums were a mere handful of prunes, and shriveled ones at that, so far as feminine appointments were concerned. In those days a woman's Federal ambition never soared above a job as postmistress in a small town. With the salary based on a percentage of stamps sold, the small town postoffice was no place for a man to maintain his dignity anyway, the women were given the places without protest.

Such jobs, of course, had other than mere monetary compensations for those who sought them. There was, for instance, the chance to see one's neighbors every day without the worry of having to keep the house slicked up. With her small office set up in her husband's general store, the postmistress was ever in a position to receive callers.

Then, when the rural editor fell down on his job, the town's only female official was frequently placed in the position of playing Walter Winchell to the town, even if it took an occasional "peak" inside a perfume scented envelope to do so.

Today, there are still small town postmistresses who hold forth because men don't want the jobs. But with women drawing many of the trump cards out of the New Deal deck, they have a chance of bettering their stations. Feminine curiosity today is not so much concerned with perfumed as with pay envelopes. And the Postoffices Department door is thrown open to them more widely than ever before.

"Cancer."

If June 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

You may be thrown into contact on this June 29, with a very unreasonable type of individual. If this party is handled with a great deal of tact, you probably will be surprised how easily you can receive sufficient money within the next 24 hours to make you feel contented.

If a woman and your birthday is June 29, you possess "the gift of the tongue," and your fluency of speech should enable you to meet with unqualified success in any type of business requiring salesmanship.

The child born on June 29, as it grows up, will evince the greatest amount of interest in any and everything. The numerous questions it will continually ask may at times exasperate you, but refrain from showing annoyance as this trait should be encouraged.

The man born on June 29 is, as a rule, a very studious and thoughtful individual. If born on this date, you have either a very ludicrous or artistic disposition. If the former characteristic, you should make a great success in the legal, medical or literary profession. If of an artistic nature, sculptoring, painting, or the theatrical profession should offer unlimited opportunities. You should marry and have your own home.

Dress to Suit Face, Women Are Advised

NEW YORK, June 27 (AP).—A woman's face may be her fortune if she thinks of it as the outward expression of her personality and dresses to suit it, Miss Belle Northrup, assistant professor of fine arts at Columbia University, told members of the American Home Economics Association today.

Miss Northrup advocated dressing to suit the face rather than the figure, as many women do.

"If your facial expression reveals delicacy, gentleness, lightness, softness, you should wear soft ruffly clothes—frills if you wish," she said.

"An expression revealing strength, severity, dignity and power calls for well-cut, straight-line garments of rich material but without frills and furbelows.

"Tallness or smallness of stature are not as important in the final effect of good dressing as facial expression."

A full-length mirror should be the prized and cherished possession of every woman, Marion C. Taylor, magazine editor, told a group of delegates.

"Unless you see yourself often," Miss Taylor added, "you will forget what you look like and people may consider you lazy, careless or just ignorant. It used to be that women in business considered they had to be the shirt-waist type. Then they swung clear to the other side and overdid it in that direction. Now they are just about right."

Over-Bright Children Get Own School

NEW YORK, June 28 (Spl.). For years educators have sought to make easy the way of the backward student. Now they are seeking to give the over-bright child a chance.

What is known as a "high school for geniuses" is being developed here. The famous junior high school of Principal Angelo Patri is being converted into a senior high school with a strongly scientific bent. It is to act as a clearing house for talented students to steer them into special training.

Many especially gifted students in the ordinary high school are ready to begin serious professional study without waiting for college, educators believe. This high school will give them such an opportunity. Situated in the Bronx near the Botanical Gardens and the Zoo, it will afford special opportunity for laboratory work.

PILLAR TO POST

Penthouse People.

A STRANGE assortment of people occupy the penthouses of Washington. The list includes a bride and groom, an Assistant Treasurer of the United States and an Assistant Commissioner of Patents, a woman who has been married seven times and bachelor girls, Army and Navy officers, aviators, newspaper people and seemingly prosaic business men. But no matter how diverse in type the whole list from bride to business men, have a poetic streak about their persons.

* * * *

Penthouses and romance have been linked ever since they first became a fad in New York City, resulting perhaps from the magnificence of the view. For no matter how mean and tawdry the streets below, the inverted bowl of sky rimmed by the far horizon is always inspiring.

* * * *

Washington spread out in panorama before penthouse dwellers at night, is a glamorous fairy city with the illuminated dome of the Capitol and rays of white light on the Lincoln Memorial and the Monument.

Other Enthusiasts.

A SIMILAR penthouse houses the much-married Jean Hoyt, the former Eugenia Bankhead, daughter of the Congressman from Alabama and sister of the movie star Tallulah, and her pet monkey. Near neighbors are Col. John B. Steck and Lieut. Townsend Griffith. Several newspaper "gals" have bachelor quarters there too, including Bab Lincoln.

* * * *

Perhaps the most elaborate penthouse in town is the one atop a Sixteenth street hotel, with a wonderful tropical garden surrounding it. It is occupied by the Edward F. Pickfords, who are out of town at present.

* * * *

The romance of penthouses has no longer an appeal for Mrs. N. Bayard Schindel, the novelist who has written "Heat" and "Eden," under the name of Isa Glenn. She lives on the ninth floor of a building near Dupont Circle, but won't consider living in the penthouses just above her.

* * * *

"I lived in a penthouse for three years in New York," she said, "and was fed up on it. It was hot in summer and frightfully cold in winter. Moreover I saw a ghost there, I really did." She turned the spooky experience to account by writing a ghost story called "Penthouse," published a few years ago.

* * * *

Senator Logan, of Kentucky, has also been cured of his yearning for a penthouse. He recently moved out of one. Strangely enough the Senator, who has been nicknamed "Tarzan" by his colleagues in the Senate, complained he did not like living so far from the ground.

"I was always afraid I would fall off," was the incredible explanation of the Senator, whose early life was spent in the mountains of eastern Kentucky.

Girls Follow Dictates of Gypsy Blood, Rove Over America on Motorcycle

After Exciting Odyssey Through 22 States Arrive Here.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

SUMMER convinces the most prosaic person he or she has gypsy blood.

The sight of highways white-hot under the sun, the tantalizing touch of vagrant breezes against the cheek, that inexplicable feeling of friendliness and unity with all the world that greenness and warm nights bring, makes everyone long for a vagabond life.

Revolting within, he, or she, sits calmly on the front veranda, thinking that somewhere is magic, romance, release from dullness and stifling security.

The family talks over the vacation situation. Shall they go to the mountains or the beach? To the beach, of course, is the decision. The mountains are too far away. Besides, they have always gone to the beach.

But Eleanor Fait and Natalie Day of Woodland, Calif., had the courage to follow their roving instincts. They left the dignified security of library positions, purchased a motorcycle—although neither of them had ever driven one—and began bumping hilariously through the country.

Motorcycle Odyssey.

They have been in 21 States, they relate; have traveled more than 7,000 miles in four weeks. The motorcycle has cost them only $58, in gasoline and five bad hours.

The bad hours were in New Mexico when they went hundreds of miles out of civilization to visit Taos, one of the few Indian pueblos unspoiled by the improvements of the white man.

"On the way we had a flat tire," Miss Fait explained. "Neither of us had ever changed a tire on a motorcycle. There wasn't a house in miles of us. In five hours we had it fixed, only to discover that we had punctured the inner tube. We had to put on the old tire again, and pump it up every half mile."

It was in a New Mexico art colony the young motorcyclists met Tony Lu Juan, famed as the handsomest Indian in America, and now married to Mabel Dodge Juan, society girl and author.

The Indian Juan may have sex appeal, they admit. For he is tall, dark, and handsome. But they were somewhat startled by the long black braids hanging down his back, and wondered how he converses with his cultured wife. His conversation consists mostly of grunts and short phrases.

Huey Long's pajama antics have not made the Louisianians immune to shocking sights. And the trousered gals, driving their motorcycle in practiced fashion, caused traffic jams. They held up trade in department stores where they went to shop, causing the inhabitants to stare, whistle, and express their horror.

Shock Washingtonians.

"The attitude of the people in the South was amazing," said Miss Fait. "In the West no one noticed us. Down there they are still shocked at the sight of girls wearing pants."

Even in Washington the girls were regarded suspiciously at several places.

The young women plan to tour the New England States after they leave Washington, then go to Florida, and from there back to California by boat.

This is not the first summer Miss Fait has tried her luck on the highways. Being a former social service worker, she decided last summer to try out hitch-hiking, first hand. She started from Woodland with $2 in her pocket and traveled 8,000 miles, meeting and talking to hundreds of the transient girls who hitch-hike from city to city in search of jobs.

"I lived just as those girls did," Miss Fait said. "And I saw the cruel manner in which they were treated at the so-called relief agencies. I know that after a few experiences with relief agencies a girl on the road will go cold and hungry before she will endure the humiliation necessary to obtain a night's lodging and food. The prim old maids who run those places are not good judges of human nature. No matter how a girl looks, whether she is educated and refined or not, they treat her suspiciously if she is hitch-hiking. I say this, although I was once a settlement house worker myself."

Shiny Noses Vanish; This Base Does It

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHAT IS so rare on a June, July, or August day as a nose without a shine? And what more acceptable to feminine beauty fans than something for overcoming this? A beautician known in Europe and America has concocted a liquid which has won its laurels as a powder base for oily skins.

It should also have a medal or two for the other things it does. Used regularly it not only hides but corrects excessively oily skin, tends to make large pores smaller and prevent blackheads. Usually there are any number of different treatments recommended for each of these conditions. But here is one thing, a simple powder base which, while serving to keep the powder on, works to remedy other troubles.

* * * *

Mashie Mixers.

Mashie highball mixers are not unusual sights on novelty counters and in gift shops. But those featured now in the basement of a local shop sell for an unusual price, two for 10 cents.

These miniature mashies are real modern conveniences for keeping one's highball proof against a strong bottom and weak top. They also enable one to wrest the last remnant of flavor from accompanying orange, lemon, or cherry.

* * * *

New Shapes For Cases.

Cigarette cases are acquiring new shapes. There are several on display in a Connecticut avenue shop which are long, narrow and delightfully thin. Those in a creamy white with colored stripes along one end are unusually attractive. Combined with a compact to match they make a striking ensemble.

* * * *

Kitchen Aids.

Kitchen conveniences occupy a conspicuous place in the notions department of a local store. Here they have all kinds of dish rags, mats, and other things. But the towel roll is the newest, most novel, and by far most popular.

A metal rack, in green or ivory, comes ready to fasten to the wall. And on this a long roll of 150 paper towels. Those who have never tried them might not know how indispensable they become. In the case of fried foods for instance—peel a towel off, place on the table or drainboard and allow the food to remain on it until a large amount of surplus grease has been absorbed.

And then for greasy pans. A towel or two will wipe the grease away and safeguard the hands. After use they can be thrown away. Of course, too, they're ideal for mopping up spilled things.

Try them for a little while and notice an appreciable decrease in the laundry bill. One rack, plus two rolls, is 50 cents.

* * * *

Soap Leaves.

Speaking of conveniences brings to mind the book of soap leaves featured in a downtown store. They look like a little book of cigarette papers, but they're far more appealing to the feminine shoppers. Each leaf is specially prepared with a delicately perfumed toilet soap. They can be carried in one's pocket or purse, and pulled out just any time for a neat job of hand washing.

Picknickers find them most adaptable luxuries. Travelers, the nth degree of convenience. As for shoppers, let one form the habit of carrying a book of soap leaves and she'll not be likely to break it.

* * * *

Utility Box.

Picnickers have the privilege now of buying a real utility box. Its black composition material and bright metal clasps give it the appearance of first-class luggage. But opened up does the most surprising things. First of all, its 18 by 22½ inches makes it roomy enough to carry a lunch for a dozen or more, plus other little picnic items. And when little concealed legs fold out of it, it stands upright as a table or a regular banquet board.

Those who spend Sundays at the beach can readily realize how splendidly this combination bag-table will suit their needs. For one thing, it isn't apt to become coated with sand as quickly as a cloth spread prone on the ground. And it's infinitely more protective from ants and other bothersome pests.

* * * *

Powder Bargain.

And so is the chance to buy a box of fine face powder with a "loosepact" for $1.45.

Ordinarily the powder sells for as much alone, but at present, to stimulate customers' interest, the English concern which manufactures it is promoting this sale.

The powder is excellent quality, fine grained and smooth. The compact, or more properly loosepact, due to the arrangement for holding loose powder, is plain, bright metal, lightweight, and small.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

Gerald Gerrish, attorney, loaned Martha Blaisdell money on her own securities and spread the rumor he was supporting her. She upbraided him and, visiting her apartment, he died of a stroke there. Herbert Cranston, her fiance, and Dr. Peter Baxter, who also loved her, together smuggled the body out to avert further scandal. Ansted, Gerrish's valet, suspected and talked in the presence of Gotham, Planet reporter.

"YOU'D better go home and sleep it off," jeered Gotham.

"The trouble with you is that you're so upset that a few drinks make you goofy. Didn't die in the doctor's office, eh? Where else could he have died? How could he have got to the office, and why would any one bring him there if he were dead?"

"Suppose somebody didn't think that where he died would look too good?" countered Ansted. "Suppose they carried him to a doctor's office to avoid scandal."

Gotham smiled patiently, a little wearily.

"You'll be seeing things any minute now," he said.

"And suppose the two people that saw my master being carried into Dr. Baxter's office this afternoon were seeing things, too!"

"You mean you've got witnesses to that?" demanded Gotham. There was no sneer on his lips now; his voice was incisive and his eyes were hard.

Blackmail in Mind.

"I don't seem so drunk now, do I? Certainly I've got witnesses. Two men caried a third man in, and only one of them came out."

"Will those witnesses identify Baxter as one of the men?"

"Do you think I'd be talking to you now if they would? I'd be with the police, telling them my story, telling them all the things I've checked up."

"And what are they?" inquired Gotham.

Ansted was cunning; he had affection for Gerrish, but he would have put money above regard had he been completely sober. Something like blackmail had been in the back of his mind all day. It had not been formulated, was not clear, but he would have esteemed financial reward more than the bringing about of justice in his more normal moments. But now he was intoxicated, and cunning had deserted him. Also, he felt that he had been rather shrewd in tracing Gerrish's movements as well as he had, and he wanted to boast of his cleverness. Within fifteen minutes Gotham had not merely heard Ansted's story, but had cross-examined the man shrewdly, without finding a flaw in the tale. It was a whale of a story. There might even be a murder trial involved in the matter, although Gotham didn't believe this. Nevertheless, it was possible.

Story Unsupported.

He stared at the valet, who was now nearly maudlin. He wouldn't dare, and the Planet wouldn't dare, to print the valet's statement. Not on the man's unsupported story. But if the police could be induced to take some action, the occasion for such action could be printed without fear of libel. Gotham went into action with that certain celerity which had made him an outstanding though not too admirable purveyor of news.

He rose from the table and walked over to the bar.

"Tony," he said to the white-jacketed attendant, "there's a stew at the table. He's not too cock-eyed, but I want him cold sober in 15 minutes. It doesn't matter whether he likes it or not. Give him the works."

Tony nodded comprehendingly.

"He's practically a teetotaler this minute," he grinned.

People Stared.

He mixed something in a glass and walked around the bar to Ansted.

"Drink this," he ordered.

Ansted tasted the concoction, then set it down.

"This isn't Scotch, and I want Scotch," he said.

Without the slightest hesitation, Tony slapped him savagely on the face.

"It's Scotch to you, mug," he said. "Drink it."

"Better drink it quick," he advised.

Other tables' occupants started curiously for a moment, then turned to their own affairs. Too great a curiosity is not always healthy in speakeasies.

Ansted swallowed the drink. Even as he sputtered and gasped he was lifted from his chair and hustled through a rear door. His clothes were torn from him and he was thrown under a shower that was scalding hot one moment and icy cold the next. From somewhere in the building came a burly man who rubbed and slapped and kneaded the hapless valet. Within the prescribed 15 minutes Ansted was pale and shaking and sick, but indubitably sober.

Taken to Headquarters.

"Now, listen," said Gotham. "You're coming to police headquarters with me. You're going to demand an autopsy on the body of Gerrish. You're going to tell the folks down there exactly what you've told me."

"I won't do it," whined Ansted. "I can't prove anything."

"To hell with proof," snarled Gotham. "You say you've got two people to swear that a man was carried into Dr. Baxter's office. You've got taxi men who brought him down there to Miss Blaisdell's apartment, and didn't see him go away. Proof? What the hell! Any more proof than that would spoil the story. It wouldn't give a good man opportunity to exercise his imagination, and, believe me, boy, this is a story that needs plenty of imagination."

"I don't want to see the police," weakly protested the valet.

Persuasion Used.

"Of course you don't; you were going to shake down Baxter and Miss Blaisdell and anyone else you could. But you're not going to now. If you don't come with me, I'll have a warrant out for your arrest in half an hour, charging you with conspiracy to cover up crime. Listen, yap, I could stick enough warrants on you to paper the Grand Central Station. Are you coming quietly, or do I have to belt you over the ear to make you nice and tractable?"

"I'll go," said Ansted.

Twenty minutes later the cringing valet was led into the office of Lieut. Davis, of the Homicide Bureau.

The policeman stared at Gotham.

"What's it all about?" demanded the lieutenant.

"I want a beat, an honest-to-God beat," replied Gotham. "Oh, I know that the other papers will get out an edition in 20 minutes, and that hardly any one will know I had a beat except myself, but I want it. Do I get it?"

Lieut. Davis grinned.

"Able, you said. Energetic, you said. Brilliant, you said. Twenty minutes ain't much to give to a man that uses the wonderful language you do. Shoot."

Story to Write.

"What's on your mind, Georgie?" He impaled some flimsy on a spike. "I haven't seen you in the office for months. Thought you always sent your stuff down by a messenger."

"I always do, early in the afternoon, in plenty of time for the boys on the copy desk to give way to their instincts for mayhem. Gosh, it would be swell to have my copy read by some bird that didn't think he could improve it."

"And I suppose you come down here to beef about the extra commas the boys insert?"

Gotham shook his head.

"I came down to write a swell story. Boy, I've brought you a beat."

* * * *

Aware of Gossip.

Martha had been aware of gossip about herself, and had felt it too dreadful to bear. She had known that the Planet would print the fact that Gerrish had tried to institute suit against her, and somehow she had been prepared to meet this with courage. But she had not dreamed of the notoriety that would come to her if the facts about Gerrish's death became known.

Detectives had come to her some time before midnight. They told her that her presence was required at headquarters. She had gone down there, to be confronted by Ansted. She had heard him repeat to police officials the tale he had told her earlier tonight. She had no opportunity to converse privately with Cranston and Baxter, and when a soft-voiced official turned to her to ask questions, her nerves were stretched so tight they very nearly broke.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

'Glorious 4th' Needs Good Picnic Food

These Menus Will Tempt, No Matter How Hot the Weather.

A PICNICKING we'll go! It isn't too early to begin planning the celebration of the Glorious Fourth. And because hot weather will probably be our lot (it usually is) the picnic lunches should be thoughtfully planned and prepared.

Here are a few ideas. The menus should tempt the appetite and will require a minimum amount of preparation.

Perhaps you want to get away from home and you want to carry your picnic meal to the woods or beach. Then serve date, apricot, nut, cheese spread sandwiches, bacon, and peanut butter sandwiches all wrapped in their respective colored wax paper or festive wax paper wrapping. You will find they take on a more appealing appearance and are easier to locate in the picnic basket. A goodly assortment of ready-to-serve cold sliced meats made into sandwiches might furnish the main sandwich of the menu. Cabbage salad packed in individual paper cups and fresh pineapple cut into fingers and packed in individual cups also will be good. These with individual chocolate cup cakes and iced tea from a thermos bottle, finish the procession emanating from the picnic basket.

For a Woods Supper.

Cooked-on-the-spot picnics are of two kinds, either for the woods or for the beach. If you are adjourning to the woods, then take along some chilled canned tomato juice that the picnickers may be sipping while waiting for the stones to heat to broiling the thickly cut beefsteaks. Either good quality round steak or chuck steak is excellent and inexpensive for picnic cookery. Have the market man cut it into individual proportions before it leaves his store.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Heart Pain.

There are numerous condition in which pain may occur in the region of the heart that have nothing whatever to do with the heart itself or with its blood supply. Intercostal neuralgia or pains incident to chronic arthritis are not related to heart pain. Certain individuals who may have occasional shooting or stabbing pains in the region of the heart or of the left shoulder make a self-diagnosis of heart disease or angina pectoris. In such persons angina becomes a phobia and may be fully as disabling as true heart disease.

Pain or angina having its origin in the heart is a symptom that means that the heart muscle is fatigued. It is the red signal of danger and means stop! The pain may be due to overexertion or to a deficient supply of blood to the heart muscle.

There are several disease conditions that may influence the supply of blood to the heart muscle. For example, arteriosclerosis that develops slowly but progressively may narrow the blood vessels supplying the heart muscle and hence cause a real deficiency in the circulation.

Pain actually arising in the heart is usually excruciating in character and is reflected to the left shoulder and down the left arm. Sometimes the pain may be noted in both shoulders and be felt along both arms.

The pain of angina pectoris and the pain of coronary vessel disease differ in that the patient with angina pectoris rarely wants to move; in fact, he fears to move or make the slightest muscular effort. The patient with coronary disease pain may frequently alter his position or even walk about in the hope that some change will afford relief.

Sufferers from heart pain should avoid muscular exertion, increase the hours of rest in bed, avoid overeating and emotional stress, give strict attention to the alleviation of any disease that will increase the progress of arteriosclerosis or cause degeneration of the heart muscle, lessen the mental and physical load.

Trip to Tidewater Resorts Replete With Historical Lore and Summer Pleasures

Holiday at Virginia Beach Combines Land, Sea Travel

Auto Trails Wind Through Towns Famous in Colonial Annals—Beach and Seaport Afford Excellent Summer Diversions.

This is the confession of a Yankee who had the notion that the only boat trips in the country were on the Hudson and St. Lawrence Rivers; that the only real historic shrines were at Plymouth Rock, Bunker Hill and similar spots well north of the Mason and Dixon line; that the only Atlantic Ocean beaches were along the New England and Jersey coasts.

And then—new to Washington—he took his first trip down into Tidewater Virginia and up the Potomac.

Net result: Not only a greatly broadened knowledge of American history in its most enchanting form, but a new conception of Southern charm and hospitality as manifested at Virginia's beautiful beaches—not to mention the thrills of a romantic moonlight cruise up Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River.

History Kept Alive.

Driving across the Arlington Memorial Bridge and through Alexandria, this Yankee motorist began his trip with certain prejudices, fearful lest "historic Virginia" would offer only a series of granite markers, indicating "the approximate spot where" this or that battle was fought; this or that colonial house stood; this or that other historic spot.

Reassurance came promptly. After a few hours on a beautifully paved highway, Fredericksburg was reached, and gave the first evidence that Virginia's conception of historic shrines does not lie chiefly in somber granite with long inscriptions. True, there are many of these as essential marks of identification, but the real thrill comes in being able to see the actual buildings, homes, shops, trees and slave blocks that were so intimately connected with some of the most dramatic events of colonial, Revolutionary and Civil War history.

A tabulation of these would be absurd. Enjoyment comes not—at least to this writer—from following a guide book list of points of interest, but by walking over historic ground and suddenly coming upon George Washington's boyhood home on the Rappahannock River, the law office of President Monroe, the famous sunken road of the Battle of Fredericksburg. Or, if you like a trace of imagination with your history, you can see the descendant of the original George Washington cherry tree (alleged).

Colonial Monument.

Hours or days—even weeks—might be spent in Fredericksburg without exhausting the points of interest in nearby territory, but the Yankee likes to diversify his enjoyment, and this one motored on to Colonial Beach, farther south on the Potomac. Here the Colonial Beach Hotel and groups of cottages built about a small village bring in a large summer population to enjoy cooling waters and a sandy beach.

Farther southeast, through the real peninsular country, the motorist reaches "one of the most historic spots in America." That phrase again smacks of guide book language; it is almost an invitation to stay away. But in this instance, the traveler who stays away will be the loser.

The Colonial National Monument is a vast project, partly public, partly private, and only partly completed, which embraces Jamestown, where the first permanent English settlement was established; Williamsburg, where representative government was established, and Yorktown, where our independence was finally won, all of which are within a few miles of each other and soon will be connected with an elaborate Federal parkway.

Williamsburg Revamped.

The Williamsburg restoration is now familiar to most Americans. They know that through funds supplied by John D. Rockefeller, jr., an attempt is being made to restore accurately and to preserve for all time the most significant portions of this historic and typical city of America's colonial period. The undertaking is tremendous. To date 352 buildings of modern construction have been torn down, 57 colonial buildings have been restored, 61 colonial buildings have been constructed and two business blocks containing 25 shops have been erected. The work already has represented an expenditure of more than $11,000,000 and there is much still to be accomplished

But the figures mean little. It is more important to note that every other consideration has been subordinated to the demands of accuracy and authenticity, with tangible results. A visit to the city is necessary to appreciate its charm; the written descriptions which have appeared in the magazines and newspapers seem, for the most part, inadequate. Certainly, however, Williamsburg should not be missed by the traveler who seeks the beautiful, the interesting—yes, the thrilling spots of American soil.

Further down the peninsula which lies between the York and James river, the motorist comes to Hampton roads, scene of the battle of the Monitor and Merrimac, bordered by Old Point Comfort and the cities of Newport News, Portsmouth, and Norfolk. Here is the great United States Naval base, one of the world's great ocean ports, Army and Navy flying fields, and many historic sites—from the sensational "Witch Duck" of colonial days to the forts and battlefields of three wars.

A Hive of Transport.

The visitor will be impressed with water and air traffic. From most any point on the water front, all types of Navy vessels, speedboats, coastwise liners, ocean freighters and tugs hauling loaded train barges, may be seen weaving in and out among the harbor channels, while the sky above is rarely free of flying boats or Army bombers. To the lover of the sea—or the air—it is a thrilling spot.

And to make the picture complete, beaches of unsurpassed grandeur offer sport or relaxation to the visitor, according to individual desire. Ocean View, a few miles from Norfolk, and overlooking the entrance to Hampton Roads, boasts its bathing, its fishing, its amusement features and its scores of hotels and cottages.

Twenty miles to the east, over a beautiful shore drive parkway, past the moving sand dunes and Cape Henry Lighthouse, lies Virginia Beach, a delight to the surf bather. A half-mile of boardwalk lies along the ocean front, where real Atlantic breakers dash, against pure white sand.

Sea, Wind and Sand.

A lure of the sea in its thousand moods takes an irresistible hold on the imagination at Virginia Beach. Whether becalmed in spring and summer, or lashed by one of the winter gales into wild picturesque beauty, its appeal is instant, compelling, inspiring. And the majestic, ever-shifting sand dunes that fringe the coast complete a picture of unparalleled beauty.

But while the vacation mood continues, the return is inevitable. The wise motorist will store his car in the hold of one of the Norfolk-Washington steamers, and embarking in the early evening, enjoy a night's cruise out through Hampton Roads, up Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River, arriving in Washington early the following morning.

Note to the thrifty: Your car is carried free.

Note to the practical-minded: Meals en route are excellent.

GOODYEAR BUILDS for the Nation's capital

This is the new headquarters of Goodyear Service, Inc., in Washington, deliberately designed to be the finest service station in America. Here will be found the most modern equipment for lubrication, tire repairing, brake-testing and adjusting, battery checking and repair, in charge of factory-trained personnel. The location of this station is just south of Du Pont Circle, and the 37,600 square feet of its spacious courts and buildings face on Connecticut Avenue, 19th and N.

A new service station worthy the greatest tire success in history

Its completion just at this time carries more than ordinary significance—for it celebrates the introduction of the most spectacular tire in history.

That tire is the "G-3" All-Weather.

First announced two short months ago, its success has swept the country.

And in that success—by the practical yardstick of sales—it points the way to something the whole nation wants, which is sound business recovery.

There's no magic in the success of this tire. It is based on the oldest formula in the world—build something that people want—build it better than anything of the sort has been built before—and the public will buy.

The public wants safety in the grip of its tires—it wants its tires to keep their grip longer on today's fast-starting, quick-stopping automobiles.

Another homely principle is back of that surprising figure—the principle of being sure you're right before you go ahead.

For two years in Goodyear laboratories and on Goodyear test cars, this new tire was under development.

It is one thing to want longer non-skid mileage in a tire—it's another thing to build it.

So Goodyear engineers shipped granite grit from the trouble spots of the country—where tires wear out faster than they do on any other roads.

We used these diamond-sharp rock particles to make sandpaper, and mounted it on giant "grindstones" to test tread designs by the dozen.

The design which stood up under this vicious punishment longer than any other bore the factory symbol "G-3". We put it on tires and turned loose the test fleet, with these orders, "Speed up to 50—jam on the brakes—speed up to 50—jam on the brakes—and keep it up day and night."

That's a test ten times as tough as tires get on modern high-speed cars, but we wanted to be sure this tire could "take it."

And when the figures were in, "G-3" topped the list. It gave 43% more non-skid mileage than previous All-Weathers—twice the mileage of other tires tested against it.

That's the history of "G-3" as it was written in factory records—a story of hard and patient work which laid the foundation of success.

This spectacular tire has a broader tread—it has more grip, more non-skid blocks in the center of the tread—there is more rubber in the tread (an average of 2 pounds more per tire)—and beneath that tread is the extra-endurance, the extra-resilience of another Goodyear development: Supertwist cord, without which a tread of this shape and weight would not be practical.

Leadership built on serving the public better

For nineteen years now, it has been true that "more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind." And the reason for this leadership in sales will be found in the tire itself. Goodyear has consistently worked in the interest of the car owner, pioneering a major share of the notable improvements in tire design and construction in the past thirty years.

This includes the first straight-side tire, originated by Goodyear to eliminate rim-cutting

—the first scientifically designed non-skid tread, so successful that its basic principle is still used on Goodyear Tires today

—the principle of multiple-cord construction, adopted by the whole tire industry

—the development of patented Supertwist Cord, which lengthens the life and increases the safety of the tire body

—the pneumatic tire for trucks and buses, which has multiplied the usefulness of these two important carriers

—the Airwheel for airplanes, which has made take-offs and landings safer, especially under emergency conditions

—the Airwheel for passenger cars, now used on five times as many cars as all other "super-soft" tires combined —the pneumatic tire for farm implements, which has increased their comfort, their traveling range, their speed

—and within the past few weeks, Goodyear has introduced the new "G-3" All-Weather, built specifically to meet the needs for greater grip and longer non-skid mileage on modern cars.

These facts were published in Goodyear advertising—and overnight the whole front of tire competition changed.

People forgot the bickering, the personal attacks, the innuendoes which had been leveled at the most popular tire in the world—they turned a deaf ear to cut-prices, bargain offers, and all the time-worn tricks of merchandising which try to take the place of merit in the tire—and by thousands and tens of thousands they flocked to Goodyear dealers and demanded the new "G-3".

Demanded is no exaggeration. They said, "We want this tire and no other." They bought these tires in pairs and sets—rolled up the greatest volume of sales which Goodyear dealers—or any tire dealers—have enjoyed in years.

That's the tire you'll find waiting for you at this new Goodyear headquarters in Washington.

And the spirit which built this tire will spread through every service which this station offers—services aimed to contribute to your total satisfaction in the car you drive.

Assuredly, you will want to visit this station, and you are cordially invited to make that visit soon.

Goodyear Tire Firm Has Its Own Congress

Welfare of Employes Is Taken Care Of by Unique Plan.

Welfare of the employes of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. is cared for by a legislative body patterned exactly after the Congress of the United States, R. S. Wilkes, manager of the new local headquarters of the company at Connecticut avenue and N street northwest, revealed in an interview yesterday.

The rubber company is the only large manufacturing concern having such a plan, the manager said. It developed from an industrial relations council created in 1919 by P. W. Litchfield, then vice president and factory manager. This council was composed of executives, foremen and wage earners.

The council finally decided on the idea of an industrial assembly, with a house of representatives and a senate, modeled after our National Government. While executive power remains in the management, the assembly may legislate on all matters pertaining to working conditions, including wages, subject to approval by the factory manager, Mr. Wilkes explained.

The assembly is composed of 40 representatives and 20 senators. A senator must have had five years' continuous service and is elected for two years, representatives one year with a term of office of one year. For the purpose of voting, the factory is divided into ten separate districts. All employes on the Goodyear factory pay-roll the day preceding an election are eligible to vote.

The members of the assembly are paid for their duties. Two senators are elected in each district and one representative to each of the four precincts in each district.

"The assembly," Mr. Wilkes said, "not only forms a means of contact between men and management in forming better policies and adjusting disputes, but it also serves in an efficient manner between the men and the Labor Department. An attempt is always made to have disputes settled between the assemblymen and department supervisors, but in cases where they cannot agree matters of difference are taken up with the Labor Department.

"One of the most valuable features of the plan is the joint committee system. The work of these committees varies from that of a departmental nature in the district committees to that of definite study on more specific and larger problems in the general committees. A number of special committees also have been organized, and in many cases these have accomplished excellent results."

"I am pleased to note that business in practically all lines is distinctly and greatly better," Mr. Blythe said. "In checking figures of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. a few days ago, in connection with our plant at Akron, I found that Goodyear paid to its Akron employes in salaries and wages in the first five months of 1933 a total of $6,037,000, while during the same period in 1934 the total was $11,486,000, an increase of 90 per cent.

"Right now, Goodyear has 19,000 men and women on the Akron pay roll, an increase of 5,000 over a year ago. This is an increase of 36 per cent. I also found that the average hourly earnings of Goodyear employes were greater than in what we called the 'boom' period of 1928 and 1929.

Supports New Deal.

"Now, just how much of this improvement in Goodyear's business, as well as in other lines, is due to new National policies and how much might be traced to the working out of normal economic forces is a question, but the answer matters not so much since the fact remains that we are attaining a firmer footing.

"While I am keenly aware of dangers which confront experimental steps into new fields of social economy, I am at the same time convinced that heroic measures were called for, that the way had to be cleared for more expedient and prompt application of necessary remedies if our Nation as a people were to be led out of the economic distress which was steadily increasing as the depression continued.

"And so we at Goodyear have found ourselves accepting and enthusiastically supporting various moves which have placed unprecedented power in the hands of the administrative arm of our Government. Goodyear has repeatedly raised its voice in behalf of the aims and objectives of this New Deal, believing firmly and finally in the inherent ability of the Nation to extract therefrom a genuine social benefit and at the same time avoid the extreme dangers attached thereto.

Six-Hour-Day Pioneer.

"Goodyear, under leadership of Mr. P. W. Litchfield, president, pioneered the 6-hour-day plan about three years ago, long before there was thought, perhaps, of anything like the NRA, and it is our determination to adhere to this plan—to do our full share in spreading available work to the greatest possible number of workers.

"Taking the present situation at Goodyear in Akron as a barometer, I say it is one that spells definite human progress, because I translate it into terms of happier men and women, from whom the specter of want has been removed, and into terms of better fed and better clothed children.

"True, all want has not been removed, but the measure of progress attained is important. Speaking for the Goodyear organization as a whole, made up of more than 40,000 men and women, I am proud to say that the situation certainly is heartening."

Started With $3,500.

Starting in 1898 with a paid-up capital of only $3,500, this embryo giant of the rubber industry took over a small building in Akron, Ohio, and began making carriage and bicycle tires. The company was named in honor of Charles Goodyear, whose discovery of the process of vulcanization in 1839, after years of patient work, made possible the development of the great rubber industry.

From this small beginning, the Goodyear Co., in the 11-year period from 1922 to 1934, showed net sales aggregating $2,136,773,202. More than 80 per cent of the world's entire output of rubber is used in manufacturing automobile tires, and of the total amount Goodyear uses about one-seventh, or about 50 per cent more than any other manufacturer.

Produces Own Rubber.

In 1916, Goodyear had become the greatest of the tire companies, a leadership it since has held. Approximately every third tire in the world today was made by Goodyear. At the end of 1933, Goodyear had built more than 215,316,000 automobile tires.

The little factory of 1898 long ago gave way to great modern plants, occupying 4,500,000 square feet of floor space in Akron alone. The company has other rubber factories in California, Alabama, Canada, England, Australia and South America, and fabric mills in the South, the West and in Canada.

A huge rubber plantation has been developed in the jungles of Sumatra, and a 40,000-acre plantation in Arizona has demonstrated the possiblity of growing long staple cotton on the semiarid lands of the Southwest.

Business Cure Seen in Prices

U. of Va. Professor Tells Staunton Group of Economic Errors.

Staunton, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—"Devaluation and ensuing inflation are not means of converting a depression into recovery," Dr. Elbert A. Kincaid, professor of finance at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, said in an address here tonight at the annual banquet meeting of the Merchants and Businessmen's Association.

"The real problem," he added, "is a right relationship among prices and this rests upon a right relationship among various components of the National income."

Dr. Kincaid spoke on "The Recovery Program," his introductory remarks dealing with the depression; or what he termed the failure of the Hoover Administration to grasp the magnitude and vitality of the forces which brought on the depression, and efforts of the Roosevelt Administration to find a panacea, with particular emphasis on the Administration's monetary policy regarding gold, silver and inflation.

"Having decided to intervene to the end that the economic laws be vitalized or retarded as required," Dr. Kincaid asserted that the Administration "is obliged to see to it that the price level does not decline, no matter if such a tendency were the only real and lasting means of escape from the depression. This is so because the renewed fall of the price level would be politically fatal to any administration confronting such a situation."

Catholic Prelates ReportedImproved

Norfolk and Lynchburg Churchmen Better.

Norfolk, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Two of the outstanding Catholic leaders of Virginia, the Right Rev. Andrew J. Brennan, bishop of the diocese, and Mgr. Edward M. Tearney, of Lynchburg, dean of the diocean clergy, who are patients at St. Vincent's Hospital, are reported improving today.

Bishop Brennan has been in the hospital for several months while Mgr. Tearney has been admitted within the last week.

Bishop Brennan is said to be making steady strides toward health. His recovery is considered most remarkable in view of the fact that at one time his life was despaired of and relatives from Pennsylvania summoned. Mgr. Tearney, who has served in the priesthood 51 years, is resting at the hospital following an operation in Richmond.

Virginia Veterans' Post Hears Jordan

Claims Fairly Met, Says Richmond Official.

Harrisonburg, Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Col. E. W. Jordan, manager of the Richmond office of the Veterans' Bureau, declared last night at the dedication of the home of the Rockingham Post of the American Legion that every claim of a truly disabled World War veteran is met with all expediency.

He pointed out that many veterans who are entitled to compensation are deprived of the benefits because their papers have not been filled out properly. Col. Jordan asserted that many veterans who were cut off under the economy act are being restored as rapidly as the proper proof can be produced. He added that hospitalization for worthy cases is being met as rapidly as the facilities permit.

Glenn Elliott, of Richmond, State adjutant of the American Legion, presented the band of the Ashby Post of Bridgewater with a shield for being the best band in the department. This is the fourth time Ashby Post has received the award. Adjutant Elliott also declared that Asby Post is the first in the department to fill its membership quota during the present year.

25 Are Freed As Injunction Bond Faulty

Men Were Charged With Violating Court Picketing Order.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 28 (Spl.).—Twenty-five persons who were charged with violation of an injunction issued here a few days ago to halt picketing at Berkeley Woolen Mills plant following a strike, were freed today when Circuit Judge D. H. Rodgers found the bond form proposed faulty.

The technicality, raised by counsel for J. T. Chambers and James Frazer, was sustained in a ruling preliminary to the actual hearing.

The men had been cited for contempt of court.

Judge Rodgers made it plain that the original injunction, in which 85 persons were specifically named, and the supplemental one in which a general warning was issued, still stands. Counsel for the plaintiff immediately executed a revised bond form to conform to the injunction terms. It was indicated this will be used in event of future occasion to charge contempt.

The ruling warned that the "spirit as well as the letter of an injunction must be observed," cited a West Virginia Supreme Court decision that held "a man's labor is his most sacred asset," and emphasized that "men who try to interfere with rights of a man to labor where he will and earn a living for his family not only violate the rights of that man but violate their own rights." He discounted suggestions of defense counsel that some of those found in the vicinity of the mill were there "trying to aid the court in carrying out the injunction."

Judge Rodgers added "the court did not ask for help to carry out the injunction."

The injunction, issued shortly after the strike occurred, prohibited interference with employes endeavoring to enter the mill to work.

WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES
Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Helen Jacobs Is Easy Net Winner

Jones and Lott Are Only U. S. Stars Pressed at Wimbledon.

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 28 (AP).—The United States had almost a perfect day in the English tennis championships today with five men's and two women's singles victories.

Only Jones and Lott, of the Americans, had any trouble. The former, now a Cambridge student, but formerly a Columbia University tennis and basket ball star, rallied superbly to beat J. Siba, of Czechoslovakia, 4—6, 4—6, 6—4, 6—1, 6—3. Lott, playing carelessly against Nigel Sharpe, unranked Englishman, won 7—5, 2—6, 6—3, 1—6, 6—4.

Stoefen Beats Bernard.

Stoefen defeated the fifth ranking Frenchman, Marcel Bernard, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3; Wood won from the former Oxford captain and internationalist, H. G. N. Cooper, and Shields had a walkover when H. C. Fisher, of Switzerland, defaulted. All of the matches were in the third round.

Miss Jacobs met a fellow-American, Dorothy Andrus, in a postponed second-round match and she won as she pleased, 6—2, 6—1, while Miss Babcock defeated Mrs. A. H. Mellows, of England, 6—1, 6—3, in the third round. Sarah Palfrey, the other American survivor, did not play.

From a competitive angle the feature of the day was the center-court combat between Fred Perry, ace of the defending English Davis Cup team, and Roderick Menzel, the giant Czech captain who defeated him in Paris, where Perry sprained his ankle.

Outsteadies His Rival.

Perry still appeared to favor his ankle but outsteadied Menzel from the baseline to win 0—6, 6—3, 5—7, 6—4, 6—2.

The American phalanx in men's play will be reduced by at least one, however, as Jones and Wood clash in the fourth round. The others all have hard contests ahead, Shields against Christian Boussus, the left-handed Frenchman; Lott against Harry Hopman, of Australia, and Stoefen against H. G. N. Lee, English cup reserve.

Post Ad Brings Most Calls

After advertising the furniture of her 10-room house at 716 Nineteenth street northwest for three days—including one Sunday—in another Washington newspaper, Mrs. S. I. Mrs. Goode decided to continue the ad through the week and as a result had no difficulty in selling all her furniture.

Detroit Erases 5-Run Lead, Wins, 8-7

Defeats White Sox in 10th as Mercury Soars to 103 Degrees.

DETROIT, June 28 (AP).—Sweeping Westward following a successful Eastern invasion, the high-pressure Detroit Tigers stopped off at Navin Field long enough today to take the measure of the White Sox, 8 to 7.

Although the mercury registered 104 degrees, a June 28 record for these parts, the game dragged out into ten innings, and ended only when Gehringer and Greenberg came through with timely doubles.

Marberry, who started for Detroit, lasted until the seventh inning. During the first six frames he pitched not a single Chicago player reached third. He blew up in the seventh, however, allowing six hits which went for as many runs. Uu until that time the Tigers had been leading, 1 to 0.

Rowe Is Sent In.

During the tempestuous seventh Marberry tasted all the grief that might come a pitcher's way. Chamberlin, Jones and Simmons rapped out singles, Swanson and Madjeski doubled and Bonura got a homer. Toward the end of the inning Manager Cochrane sent in Rowe to stem the tide.

The Tigers braced up after this pounding and by the end of the ninth had tied the score. This latter feat might not have been accomplished if Dykes had not fumbled Owen's sacrifice with two men on and loaded the baces. After Doljack had fanned, Fox walked to force in Greenberg, who had drawn a pass to open the inning. Walker, who had singled earlier, brought in the tying run as Cochrane flied out. Then came the tenth, with Greenberg and Gehringer saving the day.

Tigers Are Outhit.

Chicago used four pitchers, Jones, Heving, Earnshaw and Lyons, and the Tigers got to them for a total of 13 hits. At the same time the Sox collected 15 hits off the successive offerings of Marberry, Rowe, Hamlin and Auker.

Gilbert Hunt Victorious In Upset

Reese Humbles Buxby; Gene Mako and Hess Also Advance.

PHILADELPHIA, June 28 (AP).—An 18-year-old "giant killer," who applies to tennis the "put 'em where they ain't" philosophy that Willie Keeler brought to baseball, blasted the defending champion from the National intercollegiate tennis picture today.

In chalking up his 6—4, 6—1 triumph to crash the hopes Jack Tidball, ace of the University of California at Los Angeles, had of retaining his title, this youngster, Gulbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., representing Massachusetts Tech, swept into the semifinals of the fiftieth anniversary tournament at Merion Cricket Club, Haverford.

Hunt's conquest, however, was not the only surprise in the quarter-final competition for collegedom's most prized net honor, for a Southerner, Bill Reese, of Georgia Tech, also gave the galleries a thrill as he mowed down third-seeded Martin Buxby, of Texas, 4—6, 6—2, 6—1.

Gene Mako Survives.

Surviving with the New Englander and the ace from Georgia were the favorite, Gene Mako, second ranked from Southern California, and Wilbur Hess, of Rice Institute, seeded seventh.

Mako had little difficulty in winning his quarter-final battle from Fordham's E. Ramey Donovan by scores of 6—2, 6—1, while Hess was accounting for Kendall Cram, of Tulane, 8—6, 6—2.

But Hunt's victory over the champion was by far the most startling upset the tourney has seen in its four days. The New England collegian, who holds the intercollegiate title for his district, played in the most unorthodox fashion, but with the one aim in view—to pass the Californian.

At first this brand of tennis merely nettled Tidball, but as it continued the champion became more erratic and committed more and more errors. In the end, the stroke analysis showed that Tidball had netted 21 shots and had sent 13 balls out of the court, while Hunt was scoring 20 points by placement shots.

Evened in Sixth.

Tidball opened service in the first set, but his delivery gave way before Hunt's rush in the third game. The champion tightened somewhat and evened things in the sixth game but Hunt again barged out in front in the eighth game and ran out the set. The second set was all on the New Englander's side as he broke through in the third game and won all the way from there.

Reese, in his conquest over Buxby, depended on his ground game almost entirely. His forehand kept the Texan on the run from side to side of the court and made the eventual placements seem simple. Buxby started off in his usual good form, but was unable to hold the edge when Reese's forehand game began to click.

Stone, Ill, Sent Home by Nat Manager

Suffers Near - Ptomaine Poison Attack; Yanks Here Tomorrow.

By Frank H. Young.

WHEN Manager Joe Cronin called the Nat roll in the locker room yesterday, he discovered that another name had been added to the list of sick and injured, for Outfielder Johnny Stone reported ill. The fly-hawk declared that he had eaten well, but not wisely, several days back and had been suffering from an upset tummy, bordering on ptomaine poisoning since last Monday. He begged off of pregame practice and went home and to bed. He hopes that the off-day this afternoon will enable him to get back in action against the Yankees tomorrow.

Fred Schulte advised Skipper Cronin that his injured head felt better and guaranteed to have no dizzy spells during the game in case Stone was excused.

Luke Sewell Visits Mates.

Catcher Luke Sewell visited his old Stadium haunts before the game, declaring that he felt perfectly normal, except for being a little weak and having a cut ear. The club physician has ordered him to rest for two or three days before resuming baseball activities.

Word from First Baseman Joe Kuhel, suffering from a broken ankle, is that he is chafing at the bit and does not know how his health will stand up laying around and waiting for his leg to heal so that he can don baseball livery and go to work again.

Johnson, Foxx Hit Homers as A's Win

Former Clouts 23d as Red Sox Are Beaten, 7 to 1.

Philadelphia, June 28 (AP).—Five runs in the first inning followed by Jimmy Foxx's twenty-first homer and Bob Johnson's twenty-third gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 7-to-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox today.

Johnny Welch was on the mound for the Sox when the A's let loose in the first inning. Eric McNair opened with a single and then Welch walked Bob Johnson, Foxx and Higgins, forcing in a run. Another run crossed the plate on Bill Cissell's boot of Ed Coleman's grounder, after which Dib Williams cleared the sacks with a double. Foxx hit his homer in the second and Johnson in the eighth, each with the bases empty.

Cotton's 132 New World Record

Pro Star Adds 65 to 67 to Lead by 9 Strokes in British Open.

Shute, 11 Shots Behind, Only American With Outside Hope.

By Gayle Talbot.

SANDWICH, England, June 28 (AP).—Setting the maddest pace in the history of national championship golf—either in this country or America—Henry Cotton heard the lion roar today as he added a record-smashing 65, 7 under par, to his first-round 67 and spread-eagled the field at the halfway mark of the 72-hole British open tournament, with a total of 132.

As a result of the 27-year-old British professional's dizzy pace, Alf Padgam, a fellow countryman, who, under ordinary circumstances would be walking on air with rounds of 71-70 for a total of 141, found himself in second place, trailing by 9 strokes. Seldom has the starch been taken out of a major tournament so quickly and so thoroughly as Cotton turned the trick.

With Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, the defending champion, and Joe Kirkwood tied with the veteran Briton, Charles Whitcombe, for third place at 143, America's chances of retaining the cup which her golfers have held for the past ten years appeared so remote tonight that few even mentioned it.

Sarazen Shoots a 73.

Eleven strokes were a heavy-enough handicap for any champion to attempt to overcome, but Shute was comparatively better situated than the other two members of the so-called "big four" from the United States, Gene Sarazen and MacDonald Smith, each 16 shots behind Cotton with totals of 148. Sarazen, winner of the British title in 1932, added a 73 to his first round 75, while Smith rallied with a 71 after an initial 77.

Only a complete debacle, it appeared, could prevent Cotton from being the first homebred to lift the British open trophy since Arthur Havers nosed out Walter Hagen in 1923. For the benefit of the 69 survivors, who made the qualifying grade today for the finals with scores of 153 or better, Cotton said he probably would shoot as good and perhaps better golf through the finishing 36-hole drive tomorrow.

If he continues to explode anything like the firewroks with which he has dazzled all opposition so far, Cotton will scatter records all over the place. A pair of 75's tomorrow would give him a total of 282, enough to beat the former British open record, made by Sarazen in 1932, by a single stroke. His first round 67 was a new low mark, his 65 today was the lowest single round in the history of the tournament, besides trimming another stroke off his own course record for St. George's, and his 36-hole total is far and away the best on record. The nearest things to it were Bob Jones' qualifying rounds of 66—68 in 1926 and Sarazen's 70—69—139 for the first two rounds of the 1932 championship.

The best two successive rounds in the history of the American open were Sarazen's 70—66—136 for the closing half of the 1932 United States tournament.

Top Teams Clash In District Doubles

The attractive program promised for today in the men's District tennis championships at the Columbia Country Club, in which eight seeded players will battle to gain the semifinals, somewhat overshadows the results of the matches played yesterday when three of the seeded teams in doubles fought their way through the quarter-finals.

Barney Welsh and Bud Markey, No. 2 seeded pair; Tom Mangan and Dooly Mitchell, No. 3, and Ralph McElvenny and Rickey Willis, No. 4, all successfully reached the semi-finals, but the prospect of today's matches bringing together Welsh and Tony Latona, Frank Shore and Mangan, Mitchell and Markey and Willis and McElvenny was occupying chief interest at the club as play closed yesterday.

1933 Pennant Unfurled to Breeze

Women Course Record Set by Miss Harper

Scores 78 to Enter Semi-finals in Virginia Title Tourney.

CAVALIER COUNTRY CLUB, Virginia Beach, Va., June 28 (AP).—Two titans at golf, Miss Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, and Miss Rita Main, of Danville, both mighty in ability and both tiny in size, will fight it out tomorrow over the Cavalier Country Club links for the right to play the winner in the finals on Saturday of the match between Mrs. C. G. Quesenberry, of Charlottesville, and Mrs. George Schenck, of Norfolk. To the victor in Saturday's 36-hole match will go the crown that is worn by the State's premier woman golfer.

Today Miss Harper defeated Mrs. W. R. Graham, of Richmond, 9 and 8, and incidentally, set a new course record for women with a sparkling 78, going out in 36 and negotiating the difficult last half in 42.

Miss Main Easy Victor.

Miss Main defeated Miss Martha Martin, of Richmond, 8 and 7, and was willing to call it a day as soon as victory was assured. Her card for the first nine was 38.

Mrs. Quesenberry was victorious in her match with Mrs. R. C. Welton, of Richmond, winning, 1 up, on the eighteenth hole after being down three on the first four holes.

Mrs. Schenck required an extra hole to defeat Mrs. C. B. Walden, Richmond City champion. A good-sized gallery followed the final play-off on the nineteenth.

Resuls of today's matches follow:

Championship flight—Miss Lily Harper defeated Mrs. W. R. Graham, 9 and 1; Miss Rita Main defeated Mrs. R. C. Welton, 1 up; Mrs. George Schenck defeated Mrs. B. Walden, 1 up, 19 holes.

Second flight—Miss Miriam Sydnor defeated Mrs. Alex Ryland, 7 and 5; Mrs. C. C. Friebus defeated Mrs. W. D. Wood, 6 and 5; Mrs. A. M. Traugott defeated Mrs. W. B. Thalheimer, 3 and 2; Mrs. Robert Brydon defeated Mrs. J. C. Hazan, jr., 1 up.

First flight consolation—Mrs. O. W. Owens defeated Mrs. Frank George, 2 and 1; Mrs. J. T. Priddy defeated Mrs. J. A. Sloan, 5 and 4; Mrs. H. C. Keraten defeated Mrs. Neill Wessells, 3 and 2; Mrs. W. Barham Jones defeated Miss Lillian Wood, 2 and 1.

Second flight consolation—Mrs. J. G. Martin defeated Mrs. Pat Binford, 8 and 7; Mrs. C. T. Young defeated Mrs. J. C. Brady, 8 and 6.

Harper Breaks Par in Virginia Medal Play

68 Is Low by Five Strokes; Vellines Second; Three Tied for Third.

PRINCESS ANNE CLUB, Virginia Beach, Va., June 28 (AP).—Shooting the best competitive round ever turned in by an amateur on Princess Anne course, Chandler Harper, defending champion, started his title defense today with a 68 qualifying round that was good enough to win medal honors with 5 strokes to spare.

Playing almost flawlessly with only one hole worse than par, the little Portsmouth shot-maker chopped four strokes from the course's stubborn par 72 and was the only contender who whipped perfect figures.

Wilson Vellines, of Virginia Beach, late starter who came home in the late afternoon, posted a 73. He was out in 37 but whacked 1 stroke from par in the inward nine to win runner-up honors.

Three Tied for Third.

A stroke behind at 74 came Sam Bates, of Norfolk; Bobby Reigel, of Richmond, and Roland Wright, University of Richmond star, who faltered badly after reaching the turn in 34, one under.

Billy Howell, the lad who won three Virginia championships, had a par 35 at the turn, but a disappointing 40 on the in nine left him far behind the fast-stepping Chandler. Tied with Billy at 75 was Dick Payne, of Norfolk, a tournament dark horse who was hitting his shots confidently. He was out in 35.

Four contenders were tied at 76, among them Earl Howell, Richmond star, who had perhaps the weirdest round of the day. He had five birdies to his credit, including four in a row on the outward nine, but had several equally bad holes.

Bokar Beats New Deal.

Bokar, pace-steer for Post Association honors in the Atlantic and Pacific League, continued its winning habit in independent circles by defeating the New Deal Team, 10 to 5, yesterday.

'33 Pennant Is Raised in Ceremony

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

The Yanks raised their winning streak to six straight, they raised their lead over the Nats to six full games, Pitcher Charley Ruffin raised his string of consecutive shutout victories to three, and also raised his record of consecutive scoreless innings to 29.

After the flag-hoisting ceremonies, the only thing the Nats raised was the fast ball of Ruffin, who had 'em opping up all day. The scorebook shows the Nats hit only three balls on the ground all afternoon, were held to three hits and were dealt a 4-0 defeat.

Three Runs in Fifth.

The flag-hoisting ceremonies were in the form of a gentle reminder to the Yanks of what happened last seson, with District Commissioner Melvin Hazen and Owner Clark Griffith, accompanied by players of both teams and marching behind the Army Band, sending the 1933 pennant aloft.

But along about the fifth inning, the Yanks handed the Nats no gentle reminder that this is another year. They broke up a scoreless pitching duel between Ruffing and Monte Weaver by lambasting Weaver's delivery for five hits that netted three runs and the ball game.

That 3-0 lead was as safe with Ruffing as if it had been under lock and key. As the 7,500 in the stands watched with dismay, each rise and dip of big Ruffing's big right arm transported the Yankees closer to victory and at the finish only Heinie Manush and Joe Cronin had been able to get a hit off the Yankee right-hander—Manush, two. Six hitters, he struck out.

Great Catch by Ruth.

Only once was Ruffing in serious danger of losing his shut-out record, and on that occasion he was de-

Choices Win Six Races On Card

Former Vice President Curtis Among Those at Mountain Track.

Daily Double on Rustic Cuba and Hurdy Gurdy Pays Only $8.30.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, June 28.—Former Vice President Charles Curtiss, a former jockey, was among the fair-sized midweek crowd that saw Holland drive to a length victory in the fourth race which served feature purposes at the plant of the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club today. Holland, whose daddy was Noah, a horse famed for ability at short distances, found the five furlongs to his liking and led home a field of six which found Ada Wan and Handley, the latter a 20-to-1 shot, closest at the wire.

The race was a two-horse affair, with Holland and Ada Wan dominating the important running. The filly, backed into favoritism, was first to show in front, but it was evident that Jockey Lauch, on Holland, was satisfied with his position. Although there was considerable shifting in the second division of the field, Ada Wan and Holland were running one, two to the stretch turn. With the last straight away reached, Lauch went to work on Holland and the gelding responded with a burst of speed that Ada Wan, with Jockey O'Malley up, could not match.

Pays $8.60 Mutuel.

Holland was third choice in the wagering and supplied an $8.60 mutuel.

The daily double shrunk to a mere $8.30 when Hurdy Gurdy won the first race at 80 cents on the dollar and Rustic Cuba took the third at a shade better than even money.

It was a big day for the favorite players. They were successful in six of the seven races and set a new low mutuels here when they backed This Play down to a $2.40 pay-off. The horse was not a lock proposition, however, winning by a length and a half from Rosemarie B., a 48-to-1 shot.

Cumberland Pro Cards Record 62

Fungy Eight Under Par, Has 10 Birdies.

Cumberland, Md., June 28 (Spl.).—Shooting a spectacular brand of golf while playing in a fivesome with other members of the club, Joseph Fungy, professional golfer of the Cumberland Country Club, smashed all records for the Christie road layout when he posted a 62 for 18 holes. Fungy finished the match 8 under par, and during the contest made 10 birdies, 5 on each nine. He negotiated the first nine in 31 and duplicated the stunt on the back nine.

Fungy not only shattered the course record but he set new marks for the first and back nines. He shot below par on ten holes, played even par on six, while on the thirteenth and fifteenth holes he went over par.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Charles Town, June 28.

Some days we just can't make a dime and today was one of them. Bennings, Inc., managed to resume its winning ways to the extent of two successes, but the mutuels were hardly enough to buy a refill for your cigarette lighter. It was quite warm here in the mountains today, and red-hot favorites won six races. In fact, it was so hot that Clocker Mike swore that he smelled burnt horse meat as the field was going to the post for the sixth race. That is almost as bad as the one Frankie Rice tells about the meanest starter in the world. He says this starter fined a jockey for beating the gate in a one-horse race. I'll take Milton in preference to a guy like that. BILL.

First race—Parade On appears the best suited of this group of maidens. He has given a good account of himself here and is ready to leave the maiden ranks. Disruption and Dixie Princess will be ready if the top fellow makes mistakes.

Second race—Consummation has been a hard worker here in the mountains and finds a field here that should yield a victory. Jane Porter, I fear, is not quite as good as I had her rated. However, on off track would help her. Luke Connell to take care of the others.

Third race—This is a mighty cheap field and although Mordrom threw us down in that last outing, I'm going back. Braw Scot and Radial for the place and show awards.

Fourth race—Pardon me if I try to chase In Clover home in this sprint. Has been raced into fair form and is ready to crack down. Justa Sunbeam and Giggly Ann will have some to say about the money distribution.

Sixth race—Repeal and Jockey Eddie Smith may prove the winning combination here at a fair mutuel. Aldershot, which has developed into a consistent racer, is the one to beat. Donna Dulcin is a possible surprise.

Seventh race—Dunair ran a fair race in a sprint today. That might have been the warm-up for this route assignment. I'm stringing along. Dark Star is fit and dangerous. Clocker Mike sends Rube Samuelson to his friends and they probably will send his poison.

Two-dollar mutuels—HURDY GURDY, $3.60, $2.60, $2.20; INSCRIPTION, $4.80, $2.80; DISRUPTION, $3.00.

HURDY GURDY had good speed to take command at once, drew clear from INSCRIPTION leaving the back stretch, saved ground on the turns, and held INSCRIPTION safe, when the latter came on again. INSCRIPTION, away well, raced lapped on HURDY GURDY for a quarter-mile, was taken off pace on turn and came on again gamely in the stretch, and was wearing the winner down. She raced somewhat greenly and should do better. DISRUPTION raced forwardly throughout, and huns on well.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:00½. Winner, B. S. Friedlein's b. g. (6), by American Ace—Our Betsy. Trained by J. J. Pino. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 1:22.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIBERTY ACE, $3.20, $2.80, $2.20; KING OF HEARTS, $10.60, $2.40; LADY GOLD, $2.40.

LIBERTY ACE, away well, went to the front in the race for the first turn, permitted KING OF HEARTS a short lead on the back stretch, easily took command while racing on the rail on the turn, and drew out at will. KING OF HEARTS had good speed to take command on the back stretch, gave way to the winner, but was easily best of the others. LADY GOLD raced evenly and had no excuse.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:24½. Off at 3:25. Winner, Mrs. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUSTIC CUBA, $4.60, $3.80, $2.40; WAR GENERAL, $3.80, $2.80; TALOMOND, $2.40.

RUSTIC CUBA was rated behind the early pace of JOBS DIDO, easily took command reaching the far turn, drew out into a safe lead, and was never threatened thereafter. WAR GENERAL, sluggish in the first stages, secured racing room on the inside in the back stretch, moved up stoutly, came to the outside of JOBS DIDO entering stretch, but could not menace the winner. TALOMOND, slow to get going, did not get a chance to run until reaching the home stretch, when she closed very fast.

DAILY DOUBLE (first and third races) PAID—$8.30.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:52½. Winner, J. Arthur's ch. g. (4), by Noah—Dina. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 1:00 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOLLAND, $8.60, $4.80, $4.40; ADA WAN, $4.20, $3.80; HANDLEY, $6.60.

HOLLAND, rated behind the pace of ADA WAN until straightened into the stretch, closed very fast to wear the leader down, and was going away at the finish. ADA WAN had good speed to set the pace, saved ground throughout, but was stopping at the finish. HANDLEY raced evenly in the first part, and closed stoutly.

FIFTH RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:19½. Winner, Mrs. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOREST FAUN, $4.00, $2.40, $2.60; GRAND ROX, $2.40, $3.00; ROZELL, $5.00.

FOREST FAUN, rated close to the early pace, saved ground, wore down EVENING CHIMES entering the stretch, and had enough left to hold GRAND ROX safe. The latter, closer to the pace than usual, was kept on the outside, moved up threateningly entering the stretch, but was not good enough. ROZELL lacked early speed, but closed very fast.

SIXTH RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:45. Winner, E. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THIS PLAY, $2.40, $2.40, $2.20; ROSEMARIE B., $8.40, $3.00; BURLEIGH, $2.60.

THIS PLAY, well up from the start, moved into command when leaving the back stretch; was rated in front, and drew out under mild urging. ROSEMARIE B. had good speed from outset, established a short lead, gave way to the winner and BURLEIGH, but hung on well while saving ground on the rail, and came on again. BURLEIGH, always well up, hung on well. SHEREKHAN raced evenly. SELFISH GAIN was away slowly, and suffered some interference after the start. EASTER MEDAL stumbled and fell on the back stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $250; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:11. Winner, Mrs. F. P. HOSAIN, away forwardly, and having good speed, took command at once, was rated in front throughout, went wide entering the stretch, but held HELENS ALIBI safe. The latter, always forwardly placed throughout, closed well. DO TELL, slow to find her best speed, gradually improved her position, secured racing room on the inside and, saving ground, finished stoutly. McDONALD H. raced evenly, but could not improve his position. NO MISTAKE made up some ground at the finish. FLYING START had some speed.

Choices Win Six Races On Card

Former Vice President Curtis Among Those at Mountain Track.

Daily Double on Rustic Cuba and Hurdy Gurdy Pays Only $8.30.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, June 28.—Former Vice President Charles Curtiss, a former jockey, was among the fair-sized midweek crowd that saw Holland drive to a length victory in the fourth race which served feature purposes at the plant of the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club today. Holland, whose daddy was Noah, a horse famed for ability at short distances, found the five furlongs to his liking and led home a field of six which found Ada Wan and Handley, the latter a 20-to-1 shot, closest at the wire.

The race was a two-horse affair, with Holland and Ada Wan dominating the important running. The filly, backed into favoritism, was first to show in front, but it was evident that Jockey Lauch, on Holland, was satisfied with his position. Although there was considerable shifting in the second division of the field, Ada Wan and Holland were running one, two to the stretch turn. With the last straightaway reached, Lauch went to work on Holland and the gelding responded with a burst of speed that Ada Wan, with Jockey O'Malley up, could not match.

Pays $8.60 Mutuel.

Holland was third choice in the wagering and supplied an $8.60 mutuel.

The daily double shrunk to a mere $8.30 when Hurdy Gurdy won the first race at 80 cents on the dollar and Rustic Cuba took the third at a shade better than even money.

It was a big day for the favorite players. They were successful in six of the seven races and set a new low mutuels here when they backed This Play down to a $2.40 pay-off. The horse was not a lock proposition, however, winning by a length and a half from Rosemarie B., a 48-to-1 shot.

Cumberland Pro Cards Record 62

Fungy Eight Under Par, Has 10 Birdies.

Cumberland, Md., June 28 (Spl.).—Shooting a spectacular brand of golf while playing in a fivesome with other members of the club, Joseph Fungy, professional golfer of the Cumberland Country Club, smashed all records for the Christie road layout when he posted a 62 for 18 holes. Fungy finished the match 8 under par, and during the contest made 10 birdies, 5 on each nine. He negotiated the first nine in 31 and duplicated the stunt on the back nine.

Fungy not only shattered the course record but he set new marks for the first and back nines. He shot below par on ten holes, played even par on six, while on the thirteenth and fifteenth holes he went over par.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Charles Town, June 28.

Some days we just can't make a dime and today was one of them. Bennings, Inc., managed to resume its winning ways to the extent of two successes, but the mutuels were hardly enough to buy a refill for your cigarette lighter. It was quite warm here in the mountains today, and red-hot favorites won six races. In fact, it was so hot that Clocker Mike swore that he smelled burnt horse meat as the field was going to the post for the sixth race. That is almost as bad as the one Frankie Rice tells about the meanest starter in the world. He says this starter fined a jockey for beating the gate in a one-horse race. I'll take Milton in preference to a guy like that. BILL.

First race—Parade On appears the best suited of this group of maidens. He has given a good account of himself here and is ready to leave the maiden ranks. Disruption and Dixie Princess will be ready if the top fellow makes mistakes.

Second race—Consummation has been a hard worker here in the mountains and finds a field here that should yield a victory. Jane Porter, I fear, is not quite as good as I had her rated. However, on off track would help her. Luke Connell to take care of the others.

Third race—This is a mighty cheap field and although Mordrom threw us down in that last outing, I'm going back. Braw Scot and Radial for the place and show awards.

Fourth race—Pardon me if I try to chase In Clover home in this sprint. Has been raced into fair form and is ready to crack down. Justa Sunbeam and Giggly Ann will have some to say about the money distribution.

Fifth race—The Gen has regained some of his old-time form and returns to a sprint tomorrow. I figure him a shade ahead of Doc Connor and Bokie B.

Sixth race—Repeal and Jockey Eddie Smith may prove the winning combination here at a fair mutuel. Aldershot, which has developed into a consistent racer, is the one to beat. Donna Dulcin is a possible surprise.

Seventh race—Dunair ran a fair race in a sprint today. That might have been the warm-up for this route assignment. I'm stringing along. Dark Star is fit and dangerous. Clocker Mike sends Rube Samuelson to his friends and they probably will send his poison.

Chart of Charles Town Races

WEATHER, CLEAR; TRACK FAST.

FIRST RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:39½. Winner, Graham Dougherty's ch. f. (2), by Strolling Player—Miss Bell. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 1:01 3-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight
HURDY GURDY	117	3	2	1½	1½	1½	1¹	Palumbo	$0.80
INSCRIPTION	112	4	1	2½	2½	2²	2²	Quatlebaum	5.00
DISRUPTION	112	4	3	4½½	3½	3½	3³	E. Smith	9.90
FOXTEE	112	3	6	6	5³	4½	4⁴	Prain	3.00
MERIBELLE	112	5	4	3½	4½	5⁴	5⁵	Tryon	24.40
LINNIE	112	6	5	5½	6	6	6	O'Malley	4.60

Two-dollar mutuels—HURDY GURDY, $3.60, $2.60, $2.20; INSCRIPTION, $4.80, $2.60; DISRUPTION, $3.00.

HURDY GURDY had good speed to take command at once, drew clear from INSCRIPTION leaving the back stretch, saved ground on the turns, and held INSCRIPTION safe when the latter came on again. INSCRIPTION, away well, raced lapped on HURDY GURDY for a quarter-mile, was taken off pace on turn and came on again gamely in the stretch, and was vieing the winner down. She raced somewhat erratic and should do better. DISRUPTION raced forwardly throughout, and hung on well.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:00½. Winner, S. S. Friedlein's b. g. (6), by American Ace—Our Betsy. Trained by J. J. Pino. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 1:22.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIBERTY ACE, $3.20, $2.80, $2.20; KING OF HEARTS, $10.60, $2.40; LADY GOLD, $2.40.

LIBERTY ACE, away well, went to the front in the race for the first turn, permitted KING OF HEARTS a short lead on the back stretch, easily took command while racing on the rail on the turn, and drew out at will. KING OF HEARTS had good speed to take command on the back stretch, gave way to the winner, but was easily beat of the others. LADY GOLD raced evenly and had no excuse.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:24½. Off at 3:25. Winner, Mrs. M. RUSTIC CUBA was rated behind the early pace of JOBS DIDO, easily took command reaching the far turn, drew out into a safe lead, and was never threatened thereafter. WAR GENERAL, sluggish in the first stages, secured racing room on the outside in the back stretch, moved up steadily, came to the outside of JOBS DIDO entering stretch, but could not menace the winner. TALOMOND, slow to get going, did not get a chance to run until reaching the home stretch, when she closed very fast.

DAILY DOUBLE (first and third races) PAID—$8.30.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:52½. Winner, J. Arthur's ch. g. (4), by Noah—Dina. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 1:00 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOLLAND, $8.60, $4.80, $4.40; ADA WAN, $4.20, $3.80; HANDLEY, $6 60.

HOLLAND, rated behind the pace of ADA WAN until straightened into the stretch, closed very fast to wear the leader down; and was going away at the finish. ADA WAN had good speed to get the pace, saved ground throughout, was stopping at the finish. HANDLEY raced evenly in the first part, and closed stoutly.

FIFTH RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:19½. Winner, Mrs. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOREST FAUN, $4.00, $2.40, $2.60; GRAND ROX, $2.40, $3.00; ROZELL, $5.00.

FOREST FAUN, rated close to the early pace, saved ground, wore down EVENING CHIMES entering the stretch, and had enough left to hold GRAND ROX safe. The latter, closer to the pace than usual, was kept on the outside, moved up threateningly entering the stretch, but was not good enough. ROZELL lacked early speed, but closed very fast.

SIXTH RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:45. Winner, F. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THIS PLAY, $2.40, $2.40, $2.20; ROSEMARIE B., $8.40, $3.00; BURLEIGH, $2.60.

THIS PLAY, well up from the start, moved into command when leaving the back stretch, was rated in front, and drew out under mild urging. ROSEMARIE B. had good speed from outset, established a short lead, gave way to the winner and BURLEIGH, but hung on well while saving ground on the rail, and came on again. BURLEIGH, away well, hung on with SHEREKHAN raced evenly. SELFISH GAIN was away slowly, and suffered some interference after the start. EASTER MEDAL stumbled and fell on the back stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $250; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:11. Winner, Mrs. F. P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOSAIN, $4.60, $3.20, $2.40; HELENS ALIBI, $3.20, $2.60; DO TELL, $2.20.

HOSAIN, away forwardly, and having good speed, took command at once, was rated in front throughout, went wide entering the stretch, but held HELENS ALIBI safe. The latter, always forwardly placed throughout, closed well. DO TELL, slow to find her best speed, gradually improved her position, secured racing room on the inside and, saving ground, finished stoutly. McDONALD H. raced evenly, but could not improve his position. NO MISTAKE made up some ground at the finish. FLYING START had some speed.

Both "Sailor, Beware" and National Theater Players' Season Close Saturday

Nautical Farce Rings Curtain Down 'Til Fall

By Nelson B. Bell.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

With the Saturday night performance of "Sailor, Beware" at the National Theater, the tenth annual season of the National Theater Players will be written into the record book and the E street playhouse will close its portals and darken its lights until late September inaugurates the 1934-35 season of touring road attractions.

Although we were left dangling there once before, we are constrained to go far out on the limb, as Mr. Paul Gallico would say, with this statement by reason of the emphasis placed upon it by Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National, impresario of the yearly "little season" this past decade.

"'Sailor, Beware,'" says Mr. Cochran, "after four hectic weeks at the National Theater, will end its engagement Saturday night. This announcement is positive, explicit, definite, decisive and absolute."

A June snowstorm on E street, he goes on to say, is the only thing that would make him change his mind. So it probably will snow, just to snap off the limb out which we have crawled!

Season's Recapitulation.

But to get back to the fact that the end of the run of "Sailor, Beware" also marks the end of the Players' current season: In this tenth season of repertoire, the Players did six plays. They were "The Pursuit of Happiness," "Her Master's Voice," "Welcome, Stranger," "The Road to Rome," "Jimmie's Woman" and the present naughty nautical farce.

From his personal observation, box office checkups and scrutiny of his subscription books, Mr. Cochran has come to some very definite conclusions concerning public reaction to the season about to close.

"Sailor, Beware," needless to say, proved the most successful venture of them all, although it offended many of the subscription patrons who found its humors too frank and outspoken.

How They Fared.

Of the other offerings, Panjandrum Cochran had these things to say:

"The Pursuit of Happiness" was both artistically and financially successful.

"Her Master's Voice" was well acted but not received with the enthusiasm which it deserved.

"Welcome Stranger" was a character play that audiences found "dated," but praised for the homely honesty of Robert Fischer's acting.

"The Road to Rome" proved again that costume plays, even if well done, are difficult to "sell" to stock audiences.

"Jimmie's Women" proved to be an old-fashioned farce that still was funny and deserved better patronage than it was accorded.

"Sailor, Beware," tells its own story with a four-week run—with only four performances remaining, incidentally.

So now you know.

In addition to affording Washington a month of hilarious and rowdy fun, "Sailor, Beware," has brought good fortune to five members of the National Theater Players.

Immediately following the Washington engagement Saturday night, Roy Roberts, Raymond Bramley, Freddie Sherman, Romaine Callender and John Sheilie will board a plane for Atlantic City, where they will open in their present roles Monday night in Chamberlain Brown's repertoire company which will present the Nicholson-Robinson comedy on the Boardwalk for a run.

Mr. Brown was experiencing considerable difficulty in filling his cast for the play, and so, upon learning from Mr. Cochran that he was closing his season this Saturday night, promptly, signed the five Players to carry on in the parts in which they have been appearing for the past four weeks. The others of the cast already are in rehearsal at the shore.

Drama Director Honored.

The board of governors of the Arts Club of Washington have rather flown in the face of precedent and paid Harold A. Long a pretty compliment by reelecting him chairman of the drama committee of the club for another year.

Mr. Long's first presentation of his new year will be a pretentious production of Mrs. Miriam Hilton's play, "So Nobly to Aspire," with a cast of 51, comprising the best talent in the Arts Club, augmented by well-known singers and dancers.

"So Nobly to Aspire" will be presented in the new garden of the club where a flagstone stage has been erected. Owing to the large number in the cast, Mr. Long has deemed it advisable to postpone the opening of this play until September 27, 28 and 29, in order to insure the members and their guests of a letter-perfect and finished performance.

Mrs. Hilton's play was one of those submitted in the Arts Club Workshop contest for plays written especially for performance in the new garden theater.

Reverting momentarily to "Sailor, Beware," as 'most everybody seems to have been doing, it is notable that this sea-going comedy is in its ninth month on Broadway and bids fair to run throughout the summer.

Paramount has already purchased the screen right but finds fitting the story to the requirements of the Will H. Hays Code of Morals a very real problem. Playwright Patterson McNutt is busy on one screen adaptation and a celebrated columnist on another. Both have been instructed to soft-pedal the salty humors. Either Bing Crosby or Jack Oakie will be the "Dynamite" Jones of the picture, a role now neatly encompassed at the National by Roy Roberts.

And if you think the play hasn't had "repeaters" in its audiences here, know, then, that last night a distinguished Washington merchant drove up to the theater for the fourth time to have his weekly laugh.

"This," said he to Steve Cochran, "is the funniest thing I have ever seen in a theater. I've been here every week just for the fun of a good laugh."

And there you are.

Pierce Hall Tonight.

William E. Bryant is taking the part of Senator Standish in Frank Baer's "Rhapsody in Blah," to be presented by the Pierce Hall Players tonight and tomorrow night, instead of Charles G. Gillman, who is unable to continue in the part due to an unexpected conflicting radio engagement.

Mr. Bryant is stepping into the part with only three rehearsals, his long experience as an actor with the Shakespeare Society and Washington Reader's Club standing him in good stead. Mr. Bryant also is a charter member of the Pierce Hall Players and this year is chairman of the council.

It will be interesting to the audience to know that Allen Stephens, technical director, took the trouble to go over to the House Office Building for actual dimensions and made the window in the first act of the play an exact duplicate of one in an office in the House of Representatives Office Building which faces the Capitol grounds.

This is said to be typical of the realistic treatment upon which Author Baer has insisted for his piece.

Gus Edwards, the old master in the exploitation of juvenile stage talent, seems to be one up on our old friend, Bennie Davis, recently at Loew's Fox, by taking his "Stars of Tomorrow" into the Brooklyn Vitaphone Studio to make a series of one-reel subjects for Warner Brothers. Gus hasn't been around for a long time, but in his day managed to discover a few such "names" as George Jessel, Georgie Price, Eddie Cantor, Lila Lee, Walter Winchell and many, many others who later got into the "big time" and ditto money.

Herman Ruby, studio scenario chief, and his staff of writers are busy on the scripts for the Edwards short-reels, which will go into production in the near future.

Freak of Nature.

Joe Penner, appearing in person at Loew's Fox, yesterday received an utterly unique memento from a Virginia admirer. It was a sweet potato, which, except for the matter of legs, had grown into the perfect contour of the beak, head and body of a duck.

Accompanying it was a card from Mary Louise Gallaher, Falls Church, Va., reading as follows:

"While planting my sweet potato patch down in old Virginny, I listened to one of your broadcasts and this is what happened. Accept this duck with my best wishes and compliments."

Afterthought.

Of course, somewhere on Miss Gallaher's card, tied around the potato-duck's neck, it should have said, "I yam a duck!" just to make the record complete.

Seasoned Stars of Loew Screens

Joe E. Brown sees no reason why he should be an exception to the rule. He and Mrs. Brown met in Shanghai a very charming, cultured young Chinese girl of fine family. She rejoices in the poetic sounding name of Tsingy Tsang. And, of course, Miss Tsingy Tsaig is much interested in moving pictures.

But not in the acting end. It seems that Miss Tsingy studied art in this country a few years ago, and is desirous of working in the art department of some studio. And Joe E. Brown is going to introduce her at Warner Brothers.

Nice Job For Mickey.

The happiest kid in Hollywood and environs is Mickey Rooney. He's going to pass all of two weeks on a great big farm up near Santa Cruz with the cows and chickens and rabbits—and he's going to get paid for it.

Young Rooney has just been given the role of Tommy Miller in the new M.-G.-M. picture, "Hide Out," which went into production recently with Robert Montgomery and Loretta Young as costars.

Most of this story takes place upon a farm (we call 'em ranches out here, you know) and deals with a racketeer who finds himself suddenly flung among simple country folks.

Ensuing Week In Amusements Sets New Pace

Picture Houses, Parks and "Barn" Theaters Will Be on Summertime Basis.

With the termination of the "little season" of the National Theater Players Saturday night, next week's amusement offerings confine themselves to the picture houses, outdoor resorts and "barn" theater activities.

Beginning on Friday, "Little Miss Marker," Paramount's picturization of the story by Damon Runyon, will bring Shirley Temple, the most talked-of of the screen's baby stars to the silver sheet at Loew's Fox Theater. Supporting the sensational 5-year-old actress in this subject are Adolphe Menjou and the late Dorothy Dell. Head-lining the stage portion of the bill will be Will Mahoney, the dancing comedian who plays the Mahoneyphone with his feet. Others on the vaudeville bill are the Three Swifts, in comedy; Mann, Robinson and Martin, novelty dancers, and, as an extra added attraction, Gertrude Niessen, the exotic favorite of the radio. Fox Movietone News and Prof. Lampkin's overture will complete the entertainment.

Returning to a local, downtown, first-run screen after an absence of many weeks, Joe E. Brown will be seen at the Earle for the week beginning Friday in "The Circus Clown," in which he is supported by Patricia Ellis, Donald Dillaway and Dorothy Burgess. The headline vaudevillian for the new week will be James Melton, the popular young tenor. Others participating in the stage portion of the entertainment will be Sibyl Bowan and her "Hollywood Hobbies;" Madio and Raye, two "Woolly Westerners," and Walter Dare Wahl, assisted by Emmett Oldfield. For "The Circus Clown," the Al G. Barnes Circus was utilized as background. Joe Brown, by the way, was formerly a circus acrobat. The program will be rounded out by Universal News, with Graham McNamee, and orchestral contributions, conducted by C. Frederick Clark.

Wheeler and Woolsey come to the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "Cockeyed Cavaliers," their latest full-length comedy, described as a story of "when knighthood was in sour." In this subject, the mad wags are nomadic thieves whose vagabonding involves them in endless complications with the nobility and their ladies. Thelma Todd, Dorothy Lee and Noah Beery lead the supporting cast. The bill will be completed by a varied list of short-reel subjects, including a new issue of the RKO News of the World.

• • • •

"The Thin Man," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the mystery story of the same name by Dashiel Hammett, is announced as the major screen attraction at Loew's Palace Theater for the week commencing tomorrow. William Powell and Myrna Loy are the costellar members of the cast, which also includes Minna Gombell, Maureen O'Sullivan and Nat Pendleton. Walt Disney's "Big Bad Wolf," the sequel to "Three Little Pigs," will comprise an important part of the supplementary bill. Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly also will be seen in a comedy and the Metropolitan News will be shown.

• • • •

James Cagney and Joan Blondell, who had played together on the stage before either one ever had been engaged for pictures and who journeyed to Hollywood to begin their screen careers at the same time, are costarred in "He Was Her Man," the principal screen feature for the new week, beginning tomorrow, at the Metropolitan Theater. Harold Huber, Russell Hopton and Ralph Harolde are among others importantly assigned. The feature will be augmented by a full newsreel, a Culbertson bridge subject, "Knaves of a Queen;" Eddie Gribbon and Tom Howard in "Art Trouble;" "The Chicago World's Fair" and "This Little Piggy," a song-reel, starring "Singin' Sam."

For its new week, beginning tomorrow, Loew's Columbia announces a continuation of the downtown run of "Operator 13," the play of spies in the Civil War, in which Marion Davies and Gary Cooper are costarred, with a distinguished cast in support. The bill will be completed by short sound subjects and the Paramount Sound News.

The Roadside Theater, 6 miles beyond Bethesda, Md., on the Rockville pike, will celebrate the initial appearance of the second, or comedy, half of its "double-barreled" stock company by presenting Romney Brent's "The Mad Hopes," beginning Tuesday, July 3, and continuing through the following Saturday night. It is the expectation of the management that the comedy troupe will score the same sort of triumph as the melodramatic, which last week made such a hit in "The Octoroon."

GOING . . . GOING . . . GONE!

Look what happened to Old Taylor!

A hint to those who want to get their share of the small remaining supply of 16- and 18-year-old pre-prohibition vintage whiskey

UNTIL recently we had several thousand cases of very choice Old Taylor in our bonded warehouses at Louisville.

It was pre-prohibition stock, more than 16 years old.

As this is written, not a case or a bottle of this venerable bourbon do we have to offer.

True, you can enjoy plenty of 4-year-old Old Taylor—and an excellent, mellow liquor it is too! But there is no more 16-year-old of this brand in our stocks to be had at any price.

History, we believe, is about to repeat itself.

Our splendid old Mount Vernon rye—ranging in age from 12 to 13 years—is rapidly going the way of the Old Taylor.

Certainly our rare remaining pre-prohibition bourbons—Sunny Brook and Old Grand Dad—both 16 to 18 years old—are moving into private cellars with startling dispatch.

The point is, there is necessarily a very limited quantity of pre-prohibition liquors left in the country.

Considering their age and character these we are offering are very temptingly priced.

And selling as rapidly as they are, it is our honest conviction that long before the year is out THERE WILL NOT BE A SINGLE BOTTLE LEFT.

So if you want a case or so you had better hurry!

The famous brands OLD GRAND DAD, SUNNY BROOK and MOUNT VERNON make up the greater part of this special limited stock, but also there are small quantities remaining of BOURBON de luxe, OLD MCBRAYER, BLACK GOLD, BLUE GRASS and OLD RIPY

Stocks Follow Grains' Climb To High Levels

New York, June 28 (AP).—Stocks followed rather reluctantly an upturn in grains and other commodities today.

Moderate gains were general through the list as the market stayed in a narrow range. Bullish interest again was focused on metal and sugar shares, promoted by rising silver quotations and recent improvement in position of sugar producers.

But, pending the advent of some new stimulus to trading, speculation remained at low ebb. Volume on the stock exchange, at 639,490 shares, was only slightly larger than yesterday.

Gains Bolster List.

Bolstered by fractional gains in several pivotal issues of the list, the Standard Statistics Co. average price for 90 stocks rose five-tenths of a point, to 79.3.

Cuban sugar shares extended their gains. Cuban-American sugar preferred jumped about 5 points to a new 1934 peak and Guantanamo preferred rose 4¼ points.

American Sugar Refining sold at a new top above 66 on an advance of more than a point. New peaks for 1934 or longer were registered among metal shares by Cerro de Pasco, Howe Sound and Homestake Mining.

J. I. Case, Montgomery Ward and Sears-Roebuck responded to strength in grains with advances of fractions to more than a point. Motion-picture shares ran into a forenoon selling flurry, attributed in part to seasonal falling off in attendance.

On Losing List.

Loew's lost more than a point and the preferred dropped 5¾ points. Allied Chemical sold off for a net loss of 3½ points while chemicals as a group held steady.

The list of favorable dividend actions continued to grow. Reading Railroad increased its payments to 50 cents quarterly from 25 cents previously. Warren Pipe & Foundry declared a dividend of 50 cents, the first in more than two years. Melville Shoe increased its quarterly dividend to 50 cents from 40 cents.

Loans to brokers by New York City banks, as shown in the weekly Federal Reserve report, decreased $23,000,000 to $1,017,000,000 after a rise in recent weeks, attributed in part to borrowing in connection with Government financing.

Maryland Interest On Savings Stands

Interest rates on savings accounts in the banks of five southern Maryland counties will remain the same, it was decided at a meeting of the bankers at Upper Marlboro Monday night.

Between now and September 15, when the conclave is expected to convene again, individual banks are to decide whether they can pay 3 per cent or reduce the interest to 2½ per cent on July 1. This is being done in Washington.

T. M. Jones, chairman of Group 4, Maryland State Bankers Association, who presided at the meeting, said there was possibility the rate may be reduced to 2 per cent by September. Several of the bankers said they would make no change until then.

The meeting was attended by representatives of Prince Georges, Anne Arundel, Charles, Calvert and St. Mary's Counties, which comprise the fourth group.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

"Social Management" or "Planned Economy," It Still Means Wholesale Regimentation and Giving Up of Economic Freedom.

By Ralph West Robey.

No one less adept in playing with vague terms than a college professor possibly could distinguish between "planned economy" and "social management." For this reason it is not probable that the current attempt of Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell to make a difference between the two will be of much importance. Not one politician in a thousand would dare to try to convince an audience that he is for social management, but not for planned economy.

He not only would know that he does not know the difference between the two, but he would have a strong feeling that there is no difference. And in this feeling of course he would be exactly right—both terms, in other words, mean that our economic system is to be brought under the direct supervision of Washington.

They mean that we shall be told as producers, and indirectly as consumers, what we can and can not do. If our desires happen to harmonize with the scheme worked out by the Government we shall be permitted to go ahead, if they go contrary to such plans approval will be withheld.

Mr. Tugwell Admits There Would Have to Be Guidance.

Even Mr. Tugwell apparently is willing to admit this. He is in favor, according to the speech he just made at Des Moines, of "a purposeful evolution of society." Now if this means anything it is that the development of our economic society must be along the lines carefully laid out by a central agency. Such an agency, needless to say, may change its plans as it goes along and almost certainly would find it desirable to do so as new problems arise. This would not change the basic fact, however, that we are being guided by Washington.

The answer to a charge that both economic planning and social management involve such guidance is that if the direction does not come from the Administration it will come, as it has in the past, from a small group of industrialists. It is a choice then, we are told, between being ruled by a group permeated with the profit motive and a group seeking a "reform in our social relationships which may provide equality of opportunity and higher levels of living."

Even more bluntly, it is said, the alternatives facing us are regimented by those whose policies caused the depression and regimentation by those working for the "more abundant life."

Argument Must Not Be Held Even by Those Using It.

Such a line of argument is patent nonsense. So much so that I do not believe even those using it really believe it. There is as much difference between the position of an individual under even the extreme racketeering economy of the twenties and under a planned economy as there is between day and night. And the more nearly the economic system approaches pure capitalism, the greater is the difference between it and a planned economy.

If one is inclined to doubt this let him compare the freedom as individuals we have enjoyed in this country with the freedom enjoyed by individuals under Communism in Russia or Fascism in Italy or Germany—the most perfect examples we have had "of a purposeful evolution of society."

When Administration spokesmen say therefore that social management will not curtail our freedom any more than it has been curtailed in the past, they simply are talking through their hats. It would involve a fundamental alteration in the economic system of the United States. And not an alteration that could be described as liberal capitalism, but an alteration that as it progressed would bring the position of the individuals of their country nearer and nearer to that of people living under Fascism or Communism.

XIN—Ex-interest.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 86.4 Level

U.S. Loans Continue Firm; Sales Volume Mounts to $10,590,000.

New York, June 28 (AP).—Aside from the firmness of U. S. Government securities, today's bond market failed to display any definite trend, and price variations in most categories were extremely narrow.

While transfers expanded to $10,590,000, par value, against $9,431,000 yesterday, the Government list accounted for about $2,700,000.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 86.4.

Prime Loans Steady.

Prime investment loans continued to maintain a steady to firm front and the few wide fluctuatios occurred in the secondary and semi-speculative groups.

Followers of the latter were not inclined to do much in view of the pending Presidential address to the country and the uncertainty regarding the personnel of the new stock exchange control commission.

Among the few issues that equalled or bettered their highs for the past year or longer were Armour & Co. 5½s, both Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s, of 1993 and 1995, Chile Copper 5s, Morris & Co. 4½s, National Steel 5s, New Jersey Power 4½s, Norfolk & Western Consolidated 4s, Remington Rand 5½s and Republic Steel 5s.

1934 Peaks Exceeded.

Three of the Treasury loans exceed their 1934 peaks and gains in the Government department ranged from 1-32 to 6-32 of a point.

Some of the amusement issues, including those of Warner Bros., Paramount and Loew's, were off a point or so, apparently reflecting the heaviness of their shares in stock trading. Elsewhere losses and gains were generally small and about evenly divided.

In the foreign section Germany government 5½s and 7s rallied about a point each and obligations of Australia and New South Wales were in demand for gains of more than a point.

Corn Jumps Four Cents as Wheat Climbs

Heat Wave Causes Rise in All Grains; Foods Average Higher.

Chicago, June 28 (AP).—In buying rushes that accompanied the worst heat wave this season, corn jumped 4 cents today, the maximum limit allowed for any 24-hour period.

Corn belt temperatures above 100, with official announcement that no immediate relief was in sight, gave strong emphasis to trade reports that irreparable damage to the Nation's 1934 corn crop throughout wide areas was threatened by combined heat and drought, and by chinch bugs daily increasing in number.

Highest prices of the day in all grains were reached just at the last minute, when the final gong was clearing traders out of the pits.

Corn Closes Buoyant.

Corn closed buoyant, 3⅜ to 4 cents above yesterday's finish; wheat showing 1¾ to 2¼ gain; oats 2⅛ to 2⅜ advanced, and provisions varying from 10 cents off to 10 cents up.

Notwithstanding that many traders took profits on the rapid advances in corn values, reactions were invariably overcome. Interest focused on reports that unless soaking rains or cooler temperatures came quickly this week, much of the corn crop with its leaves already curling from abnormal heat and dearth of moisture, would be unable to stand further punishment.

This applied to big stretches of territory from Nebraska across Iowa and Illinois into Indiana, and drew fresh notice to advices of like nature from the Southwest.

Wheat Feels Heat Wave.

Moreover, the wheat belt also felt the menace of the heat wave, and fears were expressed particularly as to likelihood of crop injury in spring wheat regions northwest and in soft winter wheat States. Another stimulus to buyers was word of sensationally bad threshing returns from Illinois, a development ascribed to lack of subsoil moisture earlier and to chinch bug damage.

In addition, much talk was heard that the peak of the movement of newly harvested domestic winter wheat Southwest had been passed, although receipts might continue large for a week yet.

Trade leaders stressed that corn was the cheapest feedstuff on the list—cheaper pound for pound than oats, hay, bran, flour, middlings, cotton seed, meal, or gluten. Oats advanced with corn, influenced especially by purchases attributed to processors.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to action of grains and notwithstanding hog market downturns.

Germany Alone Leads This Country in Industrial Production.

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, June 28 (AP).—Has recovery in the United States lagged behind that of other leading countries? This has become one of those controversial questions which delight economists.

Taking industrial production alone, index figures as presented in the latest League of Nations bulletin of statistics, might indicate that such important countries as England, France, Germany and Japan have been more successful in attaining predepression conditions.

Industrial Yield Compared.

The following table shows index figures of industrial production for the United States and those countries (all reduced to a base of 1928 as 100) for the years 1932, 1933, and the month of March, 1934, with the exception of the United Kingdom, for which the 1934 figure is for the entire first quarter:

	U. S.	U. K.	Ger.	Fr.	Jap.
1932	57.7	88.4	61.2	75.6	107.9
1933	68.5	93.4	68.9	84.6	128.4

While each of these countries seems to have gone farther toward restoring predepression industrial conditions, and Japan far beyond, it appears that the actual percentage gain over 1932 has been substantially larger here than in any country save Germany.

Germany in Difficulties.

But since these figures were compiled, Germany has been plunged into an exchange crisis which has paralyzed her foreign trade, at least for the moment, and foreign trade is much more important to Germany than to the United States, so the German situation is currently anything but bright.

The rather striking recovery in England, were industrial production has topped 1928, is perhaps scarcely comparable with the record in the United States, for England was enjoying no such boom as ours in that year. The entire postwar period was one of much complaint in Great Britain.

In France, the depression struck later than in most other leading countries, and recovery thus far has been unimpressive. The Japanese situation is a special one, reflecting severe currency depreciation and the inflationary effects of her expensive military campaign in China.

Recovery Dates from '32.

World recovery generally appears to have set in during 1932. The banking crisis early the next year gave the United States a setback, which may account in part for the indication that 1928 industrial activity may not as yet have been so closely approached here. It should also be pointed out that index figures of industrial production for the various countries are not based on identical factors, and are therefore comparable in only a very general way.

Economists find several parallels between the German recovery and our own, pointing particularly to the importance of government spending in each country. The German government has been borrowing heavily from her banks and big corporations on short-term securities to finance road-building and other projects to create employment. But whether Germany, a debtor to the rest of the world and dependent upon the outside world for about half her raw materials, can long persist in heavy internal borrowing is regarded as questionable.

Among the smaller countries, Sweden has been enjoying a modest boom, with industrial production getting up to 105 per cent of the 1928 level. The gold bloc countries generally have not been making much progress. Belgium, with her stagnant heavy industry, shows industrial production close to the depression low. Employment statistics for France, Italy and most other gold bloc countries show limited improvement.

Walt Mason, Himself

Hopeful Tidings.

The Government, I am informed, is by a sterner impulse warmed, and it has made its firm decree that crime must shortly cease to be. The bandits of all kinds and brands must go to jail with fettered hands; too long the law has been defied, and we have let the sinner slide; now Uncle Sam girds up his loins, prepared to blow nine tons of coins, to drill an army of good dicks who'll chase the bandits to the sticks, and bring them back in clanking chains to draw the penalties and pains. I surely hope this deadly threat won't prove again to be all wet, that Uncle Sam will keep his word and make the bandit look absurd. In olden days, when I'd a wad, I feared embezzlement or fraud, I feared some cashier might abscond with my certificate or bond. I never feared the bandit's gat or any lethal tools like that. But now I walk in deadly fear if I have 50 rubles near; I fear some snatchers may arrive, and take me from my humble hive, and make my aunt cough up her roll to save me from a wretched hole. Such crimes of violence must cease, so let us double the police, and buy ten thousand armored cars, and dynamite in fool-proof jars.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Forward to the Yacht! — By Harry J. Tuthill

WELL SISTER BUNGLE, I CAME HOME ON THE STREET CAR, AND A MAN WHO SPEAKS SEVEN DIFFERENT LANGUAGES EXPLAINED ANOTHER BIG CRISIS IN EUROPE. IT SEEMS.....
OH GEORGE, DON'T GET WOUND UP ON THAT. I HAD A TERRIBLE TIME WITH PEGGY ALL DAY ABOUT THAT YACHT TRIP.
A YACHT TRIP WOULDN'T BE SO HOT RIGHT NOW. ESPECIALLY IF YOU GO NEAR THE SUEZ CANAL WHICH IS FULL OF MINES.
DO YOU MEAN TO INSINUATE THAT AN ARISTOCRAT LIKE MONTGOMERY EL DORADO WOULD TAKE GUESTS ON A SAILING TRIP UP A CANAL? IMAGINE.
LISTEN JO, THIS SUEZ CANAL ISN'T JUST A BIG CREEK WHERE PEOPLE THROW OLD SHOES AND TOMATO CANS AND SO FORTH. IT'S THE GATEWAY TO...
GEORGE, WHAT HAS SOME DINKY LITTLE CANAL GOT TO DO WITH PEGGY'S NOTION THAT SHE ISN'T JUST WILD TO GO WITH ME? WHAT?
WHO TOLD YOU THE SUEZ CANAL WAS A DINKY? LISTEN, IT COST $100,000,000 TO BUILD.... IT'S 100 MILES LONG, AND.....
ANYHOW, IF PEGGY SAYS ANYTHING TO YOU ABOUT THAT YACHT TRIP DON'T, AS YOU USUALLY DO, JUST BOIL OVER WITH MAUDLIN SYMPATHY FOR HER BECAUSE I'VE MADE UP MY MIND WE'RE GOING.

It will be housed in a small building which will be built by the Scouts themselves.
